Mercury Was Down—
The mercury took a slide last night and got to 19 above zero. Water pipes and cars were badly frozen in some instances, the plumbers coming in for their share of work today. The maximum today was 52. The weather forecast is for fair weather.

Case Still Being Argued—
The case of The case of Row vs. George Lewis, sheriff, was still proceeding this afternoon with no sign of a setup. It occupied all of Saturday. The case was brought to determine the ownership of some hay raised on a rented farm on which an attachment was served.

Every Dentist Has a Pull—
Charles Oglesby says he is going to have a pulling time when he goes to Grants Pass. After having kept a dentist in spending money he has decided to have his teeth pulled. When anyone has all their teeth removed, friends generally wish to offer condolence while others suggest that it might be cheaper to sell a whole head for $5 rather than go through the distraction that follows extraction.—Ashland Tidings.

IRISH BORDER FIGHT LOOMS DUBLIN VIEW

Dublin, Jan. 21.—(I. N. S.)—Strangely enough English politics may be the determining factor in the controversy over the border line between the Irish Free State and Ulster.

The Anglo-Irish treaty, signed on December 6, 1921, provided for the settlement of the border question by a mixed commission. For two years this provision has waited execution, but Ulster refuses to name a member to the commission or admit its jurisdiction. There are prospects of the commission meeting, without Ulster, and handing down a decision.

Whether Ulster will resort to force of arms to oppose the findings of the commission will depend largely upon the strength and influence of the conservative party in England, according to the best opinion in Ireland. Free State Ireland feels that the conservatives are friendly to Ulster, whereas labor and the liberals are more to be depended upon to enforce the provisions of the 1921 treaty. With a conservative party in power it is believed in Dublin that Ulster might resort to arms, but with either a labor or a liberal government it is felt Ulster would not dare to act in any manner contrary to the wishes of the mother country.

The Free State does not want a clash over the border question, although it is generally admitted that for years to come there will be individual violence in the Six County Area now under dispute.

Whatever decision is finally made as to the border the Irish Free State probably will endeavor to steer clear of trouble. President Cosgrave will have a trump card up his sleeve, for he can always ask the British government to enforce the findings of the commission, and under the terms of the treaty the Free State believes it is the duty of Great Britain to enforce the decision.

The Free State is not prepared to wage war along the border, and it does not want to. The Free State army now numbers hardly more than 20,000. Ulster has no army, but it has a "police force" which probably outnumbers the Free State army and is well trained and equipped with all modern weapons of warfare. The Free State army could readily be ex-

Real Music "As You Like It"

Do your own playing! It's so much more fun than to have others do it for you. To go to your Gulbransen—and actually play—gives you a real sense of accomplishment! It interests—satisfies! It is one of the most delightful experiences imaginable!

Delightful because Gulbransen music is so expressive! So full of feeling—so full of life—you take a personal pride in producing it!

Accenting, for instance. That's important! For in any place you play there's a strain of "melody" you must pick out and accent properly, to give it a pleasing rendition.

But, where are the melody notes? In what part of the keyboard do they occur? With the ordinary player-piano that's a real problem. But by observing the Melody Indicator—a simple and convenient little patented guide—you know where the melody notes are, and just where to accent them, on the Gulbransen!
