A GREATER LOSS

In the death of Dr. Sherman Loughridge, the community has suffered a greater loss than that of a physician for it has lost a man whose thoughts were directed right, whose actions were for humanity and whose life was devoted to those he served. A man's real personality is oftentimes revealed more clearly through letters written when deeply moved. Such a letter written by Dr. Loughridge to his son and daughter, upon receipt of photographs of their two children, gives evidence of the spirit which prompted him in his many acts. It is his advice which parents may take well to heart. It follows:

"I have before me the photographs of the children, the likes of which I never beheld, except two others.

"As I gaze into the eyes of them I surely see the image of the Divine Father reflected there. As the eyes are the window of the soul, I am convinced I see there embryonic development of greater and nobler things than has as yet been attained by man.

"As I gaze once more into the faces of those sweet children, I am convinced that under proper care and teaching they will not commit one single erring act.

"The early impressions and teaching become indelibly stamped on the mind of a child and will remain as long as time lasts.

"The English language is not adequate or at least I haven't command of it, to express what is on my heart as I gaze into those sweet little faces.

"My dear children: Give them every religious advantage and training. Send them, or better, take them to Sunday school. I cannot bear the thought of them not going every Sunday.

"In our wild scramble for wealth and fame, we are apt to forget more important things. The straight and narrow is the only way that will endure. Yes, be careful children and train their steps aright.

"You never can realize the comfort and pleasure the photographs are to me and my prayer to God is that sin will never touch their sweet little hearts."

COPCO HEADS ARE SPEAKERS AT LUNCHEON

It was almost a Copco forum today when the Chamber of Commerce held its regular weekly luncheon. The heads of the California Oregon Power company were present and each had something to say in regard to development plans for this section and for the state. The main speaker was Paul B. McKee, vice president and general manager, from Medford. He took up the reasons for the cooperation between the communities and the industries located in them, with special reference to his own company. Other Copco speakers were John D. McKee, president, Joseph Grant, chairman of the board, W. H. Crawford, manager of the new industries department, and H. L. Walther, division manager for the Rogue River division.

The California Oregon Power company is in the valley for the same reasons that others are here, said Paul B. McKee. That reason is to make money. He showed where the interests of the community and the industry should be mutual for the best results for everybody. The California Oregon Power company, by its very nature, must sell its product in that community in which it is manufactured. It cannot ship it off to distant points when times are bad. For that reason the company desires to see a general condition of prosperity in its own community. The new industries work is undertaken for that purpose.

The power company has electricity to sell and has but two chances to dispose of it. The first chance is to the person already here, limited in number, and the second is to the people who may be brought here to locate. He urged the community to get behind the advertising campaign into which Oregon is now entering and bear up their part of it, especially in the follow-up part of the program. Advertising is no good without a sales campaign. By interesting the whole community, not only the new man is sold by the older resident is also interested in the proposition.

A brief summary of the new work undertaken by the company during the past year showed that the company has been expanding rapidly. The Douglas county power acquisition was one of the larger tasks undertaken. Josephine county work included a line to Marble Mountain and to other places where power was needed to push new industry. During the coming year, a part of the line through the valley will be reconstructed.

This part of the state is to get a large amount of assistance from Portland, he said. It is therefore up to the people of this locality to get busy and take advantage of the opportunity which awaits them. Large sums are being spent to bring people here but if they are to be interested this must be made a good place to live. The future holds great promise for this state, the speaker prophesied.

John B. McKee, president of the company, praised the climate here in developing a community, he said, one of the prime factors is to have good goods for sale. Capital is courageous in good enterprises but is timid if not made welcome said the president.

It is easier to make money than to spend it intelligently, according to W. H. Crawford, manager of the new industries department. It is also easier to advertise than to merchandise. A survey of the county's resources is a means of merchandising this section for then the people will know what they have to offer in the way of interesting capital here.

H. L. Walther, division manager, told of the huge advertising fund which will be spent in the next three months to advertise this state. He said that many visitors would be here in the next year and urged the people of the county to be prepared for them.

Joseph Grant recalled his early trips here as a boy and said that he would always remember this part of the country. He advocated the preservation of the trees along the highways and told of his efforts for the Save-the-Redwoods League which has accomplished much in the acquisition of large tracts of these forest monarchs.

H. B. Howell, county agent, made a brief report on the Corvallis economic conference.

to the office of medical examiner. He was ever in sympathy with the covenants of brotherhood making all men akin, and freely contributed to their needs and achievements.

WHEREAS, he was deeply and vitally interested in all the various business, professional and humanitarian activities of the community:

NOW THEREFORE, be it resolved that we each and all mourn his loss as a great and good man, a skilled physician and a most estimable citizen. That we treasure his memory as worthy of emulation, and that each and all of us strive to fill the place in the community which it was his pleasure to hold, and thus endeavor to shoulder the load he has laid down. That we emulate his virtues by measuring up as far as we are able, to the high ideals, he has so persistently maintained, and that upon the altar of his memory we lay the tribute of our tears.

Resolved that a copy of this tribute and resolution be delivered to the sorrowing family and to the press for publication.

WOOL GROWERS CONVE

Twenty-seventh Annual Convention Is Now in Progress

Pendleton, Ore., Jan. 28.—(A. P.)—Oregon wool growers are here for the 27th annual convention today. President Fred W. Falconer, of Pendleton, gave his report. Frank J. Hagenbarth, president of the national wool growers, is among convention speakers.

A Quier Thing.

One of the queer things about us all is that we'd sooner believe what is told us by a stranger than what is told by our best friends.

OBITUARY

Sherman Loughridge
Sherman, son of John and Emily
Loughridge, was born at Oskaloosa, Iowa, December 1, 1864. His early life was spent on his father's farm.

In 1883 he went to Kansas and "took up" a homestead. Here he met Margaret N. Findley, to whom he was married at Moreland, Graham county, Kansas. Two daughters, Kittie and Emma, were born to this union.

From early boyhood it had been his ambition to "be a Dr." He never lost sight of that purpose. The Kansas farm was but a "means to an end."

In 1893, he sold the farm and stock, and with his family removed to Kansas City, where he entered the University of Missouri Medical School from which he graduated with honor.

Returning to Eastern Kansas, he engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery for six years, or until 1903, when he came to Oregon, locating first at Ashland, but later, as a member of the firm of Parker,
Findley & Loughridge, at Grants Pass, where he spent the last 20 years of his life. He has been for many years surgeon for the Southern Pacific railroad.

Dr. Loughridge met his death, as the result of an automobile accident.
He was taken to Portland, but died in the Good Samaritan hospital from the result of his injuries. He was hurrying in response to a maternity call when the machine he was driving skidded off the Rogue river bridge, and dropping 30 feet, overturned, and pinned him beneath it.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Charles H. Day, of Portland, and Mrs. Paul E. Blanchard, of Chicago; two grand children Margaret Gertrude Blanchard and Sherman Loughridge Blanchard;
three brothers, Bryson Loughridge, of Polio, Oklahoma, Dr. James Loughridge, of Folsom, California,
Ernest Loughridge, of Wilderville,
Oregon, and one sister, Mrs. William Dutton, of Hastings, Nebraska.

Grace Jane Simpson Skeeters

At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Leo M. Martin, Toledo, Ore.,
Mrs. Grace Jane Simpson Skeeters
passed away at the age of 84 years, 4 months and 28 days. She died
Thursday morning, January 24, 1924. She is survived by three daughters and two sons: Mrs. Leo Martin, Mrs. Sarah Sowell, of Kerby, Ore., Mrs. Geo. Yarbrough, of Marshfield, Ore., Chas. Skeeters, of Medford, and Joseph Skeeters, of Talent, Ore.

She was the mother of eleven children. The remains will be interred at Kerby, Ore., and church services were held in Grants Pass this morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Skeeters was born in Nelson county, Kentucky, in 1839. Her parents settled in Missouri where they lived until Mrs.

Skeeters was 12 years old. She crossed the plains in 1853. Many prominent pioneers of the Oregon country were in the emigrant train of which Mrs. Skeeters was a member. Her family was on the road six months and settled on Sauvie's Island below Portland. Later the family moved to Jackson county.
Mrs. Skeeters lived in Portland when there were only two stores there and her family kept the only hotel or boarding house there at that time.
She was a true pioneer of Oregon.
She was well known and beloved for her kindness and charity and is mourned alike by friends and relatives. Mr. Skeeters was in the party that discovered Crater Lake.
