THE ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

There is in session today at the courthouse a conference which may mean much to the future of the agriculture of Josephine county. For the first time in the history of the county the men from each farming industry are getting together to work out solutions for those problems which face them in their work.

Merchants and farmers are equally interested, for as the farming becomes more prosperous, it is reflected in business conditions within the city. And moreover, the merchant and the farmer are meeting on equal terms as business men with a common problem to work out.

On a day like this and on nights like Josephine county is now experiencing, there is no reason to be ashamed of the "Climate." It is noticeable at night that the "Climate" in "It's the Climate" over Sixth street is dark. It needs lighting up.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 21.—(I. N. S.)—Solve the eternal triangle by allowing the trio to live together!

This, in brief, is the plan proposed by Charles Webber, who was arrested here the other day on a charge of bigamy. Webber was arrested on complaint of J. Tuttle, of New Orleans, who charged that Webber disappeared with his wife, later marrying her in Atlanta.

"I trafficked them to Atlanta," said Tuttle, "and found them living together here, having been married some weeks ago. We were happy until Webber came to board with us in New Orleans. Now everything is dark and miserable. I am ready to forgive my wife in spite of all she has done, but I intend to see that justice is administered to Webber."

Here is Webber's story of the triangular love affair:

"I came to Atlanta and saw Mrs. Tuttle here. I was in love with her and she loved me. Someone suggested we get married, since we loved each other, and we were married. She loves me and not Tuttle. The easiest way out of it would be for all of us to live together. Tuttle, if he loves his wife, could make that sacrifice for her happiness.

Georgia is perhaps the foremost state in proposing memorials to the name of Woodrow Wilson, a son of the Old South, who spent much time in Georgia during his life. Wilson attended school in Augusta, Ga., and later practiced law in this state. His first wife was buried at Rome, Ga.

The first project investigated memorializing the name of Wilson was that of establishing an education institution in Valdosta, Ga., to be known as the Woodrow Wilson Memorial College. Valdosta citizens have pledged upwards of $900,000 to this proposed institution. Smaller contributions have been subscribed by cities surrounding Valdosta. Governor Clifford Walker has assured those back of the project of his good will, and members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce have promised their support.

The project was given a marked boost the other day when it was learned that people outside of Georgia also are interested in the undertaking. Two prominent New Jersey business men, Milford Crane and Corbett Fisher, wired Fred Nolan, a mutual friend who lives in Valdosta, that they wanted to make substantial contributions to the proposed college.

The committee in charge of the project consists of W. D. Peoples, Mayor of Valdosta; J. M. Smith, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and A. J. Strickland, a prominent citizen of Valdosta.

Now comes word of Wilson memorial activities in another Georgia city. Some 2,000 people at Rome, Ga., got together the other day and unanimously agreed to work together in the interest of a national Wilson memorial. They proposed a national peace memorial at Washington, to be built by contributions of not more than one dollar each from the millions of admirers of Woodrow Wilson. Contributors to this fund are not to be limited to America alone, it was stated, but will extend to every peace-loving nation in the world.

The meeting was held under the leadership of the American Legion. An outline of the proposal adopted was wired to Dr. Carey Grayson, personal friend and physician of the late president, together with the initial dollar to start the fund rolling.

SHORTER LENGTH IN LUMBER NOW URGED

Washington, Feb. 21.—(I. N. S.)—Following father's footsteps costs the American people over a billion feet of good lumber annually, or a loss of over $50,000,000, according to Department of Commerce experts who are co-operating with industrial chiefs to eliminate the waste.

The lumber situation is among the most important of the "simplification in industry" projects started by Secretary of Commerce Hoover. In preliminary studies of the subject it has already been discovered that, in ignorance, disregard of scientific knowledge, industry persists in thousands of wasteful practices which have no better justification than custom, inertia and force of habit.

ards in demanding boards in even foot lengths—ten, twelve, fourteen, and so on—and refusal to buy shorter and uneven foot lengths has caused, according to lumber experts, a big percentage of that industry's loss.

Recommendations relating to the use of odd and short-length lumber and other matters regarding standardization were considered by the lumber manufacturers' standardization committee, lumber dealers and consumers and the central committee on lumber standards, which gathered in Chicago January 22 and 23.

This conference has received a report from a special sub-committee showing that an examination of 310 house plans revealed that over 24 per cent of the joists were subsequently hand-sawed to odd lengths, though specifications called for even lengths. A still larger percentage of studs were sawed to fit, and as for boards it developed that from 25 to 30 per cent in an average building were cut to less than the present minimum softwood length of eight feet.

The conference was informed that, in addition to waste in shortening, the even-length boards, about 1.5 per cent of the average log is wasted at the mill in sawing it to even lengths.

The initial conference with Hoover and the Chicago gathering were preliminary to another gathering with the secretary of commerce to be held in April, when it is expected recommendations agreed upon will be submitted for final action.

"We are determined to get all the dust-covered cobwebs out of the lumber industry and bring it up to date in economy and public service," said Wilson Compton, secretary of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

"Take the thickness of a board, for example. The national conference in December voted that what has been known as an inch board shall hereafter be called a standard board, the thickness of which when dried and dressed, ready for use, shall be 25-32nds of an inch and provided for an extra standard board of 26-32nd of an inch.

"Careful investigation has shown that it is a waste of material, freight and labor to have ordinary boards thicker than this.

"This little matter of 6 or 7-32nds present standing timber will last 7 to 10 years longer. That is practical conservation."

Oil From Penguins. The Island of Marquette lies about half way between the southern coast of Australia and the Antarctic continent. It is uninhabited, but serves as a breeding ground for millions of penguins. Recently it is reported the government of Australia has leased the island to a company which has gone into the business of manufacturing penguin oil, which is produced by digesting the bodies of the birds in huge cauldrons or boilers, in which the pressure of steam is kept at about twenty pounds. The oil is thus brought to the surface and drawn off.
