

Our Washington Letter

By W. L. Daley

Washington, April 19.—(N. E. A.)—Two interesting developments of the week—the results of primaries in various states, and the seating of Sol Bloom, a Democrat, whose election was contested, have brought out in sharp relief the question of properly cataloging candidates for office. It is said that in ordinary campaign years there are one hundred sharply-contested congressional districts but the factional conflict which now prevails has upset the calculations of the leaders of the major parties. Those charged with the responsibility of conducting the presidential and congressional campaigns are deeply concerned over the tendency to forget public loyalty in which the "herd" instinct has been a predominant factor in partisan victories.

Interviews with campaign managers identified with all parties show that it is becoming necessary to make separate classifications of the real political views of the various incumbents. It is an important work because of the crisis of change which is at hand. The claims were made that the descriptive classifications of "reactionary," "conservative," "progressive," "liberal" and "radical" are banded about without regard to their true significance. The exact shading of these words are naturally susceptible to debate, depending largely upon the sentiment current at the time. There are also numerous disputes as to the standards of valuation as the terms "conservatism" and "radicalism" are regarded as relative.

It is customary with political writers to regard Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, as an outstanding example of a reactionary or an extreme conservative in the Republican camp. This opinion is founded upon the assumption by his opponents that the Massachusetts Senator is attached to political plans based on archaic thought. On the other hand, there are some who modify their classification and include Senator Lodge as a typical conservative. Senator Borah, of Idaho, is known as a liberal Republican, while Senator LaFollette is catalogued as a former progressive who has extended his activities to a broader stage, it is said, deserving of the term "radical." Senator Norris, of Nebraska, is generally taken as a progressive Republican; Senator Simmons, Democrat of North Carolina, and a Senate leader, is tagged as a conservative, while Senator King, of Utah, is known as a progressive Democrat. Senator Wheeler, of Montana, is referred to as a Democrat of the radical type.

There have been varying differences manifested as to these political classifications. However, there seems to be a general understanding that a conservative is one who would resist innovations of progressive and radical elements, and perhaps with a little less enthusiasm for revisionary ideals of the reactionary. The progressive is supposed to stand between conservatism and radicalism and partaking of the milder characteristics of both. The liberal is known as practically the same as a progressive, although he pursues a less aggressive attitude. Radicals are those catalogued as desiring quick and thorough reform. The above is merely an analysis of opinions expressed by those identified in all branches of politics.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, has introduced a resolution now pending before the Senate, which would permit a study of amendments to the present election laws for the recodification of the present laws as may be necessary to control campaign expenditures. It would require both political parties to make a report of contributions and of expenditures every six months.

The president is also known to be opposed to large contributions as a matter of principle. According to the spokesman for the White House, Mr. Coolidge believes that it is the purpose and not the size of the contribution that should be kept in mind. He is said to hold that a small contribution to a party fund could have selfish designs in extending financial assistance equally as well as the more generous contributors parties.

The time of the Senate and House has been taken up with bitter debate regarding immigration legislation. The principal objection against the bills reported by the immigration committees is the basis of determining the racial quotas. Advocates of an extreme restrictive policy propose the census of 1890, while the more liberal element wants the census of 1910. Members of Congress who claim that the proposed legislation is discriminatory, argue that provisions are aimed against the Latin races and favor the Nordic types. The Japanese issue raised by California Senators and Congressmen is also another stumbling block because of its effect on diplomatic relations. It is believed that an agreement will be reached between the House and Senate at an early date as the present law expires June 30.

The charges and counter charges surrounding the indictment of Senator Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, by federal grand jury in his home state has brought about another investigation by the Senate. The committee will endeavor to determine the relation of the indicted Senator to the oil leases. Senator Wheeler charges that his indictment was a plot engineered by political enemies in his own state.

Two widely different tax plans are now pending in the Senate representing the recommendations of the majority and minority members of the Finance committee. The majority report calls for the adoption of the Mellon plan slightly revised in committee, while the proposal of the Democratic Senators differ somewhat from the Democratic substitute for the Mellon plan in the House, known as the Garner bill. It is similar in many respects to the Revenue bill which passed the house, known as the Longworth compromise measure. The Democratic Senators proposal calls for a maximum surtax of 40 per cent on incomes exceeding $500,000, as compared to a maximum rate of 37 1/2 per cent on incomes in excess of $200,000 as provided in the House bill. With a split in the Republican ranks in the Senate, the Democrats are hopeful that their plan, at least certain features of it, will be adopted. The leaders of both sides anticipate a protracted debate on these measures.

CITY CHURCHES PLAN

(Continued from Page One)

Closing hymn.
Benediction.
Christian Endeavor at 6:45 with special music.
7:45 p. m.
Processional.
Invocation.
Solo, "Hallelujah, Death Is Conquered," Geo. Thompson, Chester Edgerton.
Scripture.
Solo, "Easter Day Has Crowned Him King," Seymour Hawthorne; Katherine MacVicar.
Anthem, "Come Where the Lillies Bloom," Will Thompson; choir.
Solo, "Then Easter Day Was Born," Florence Turner Malley; Mrs. Chas. Gordon.
Sermon.
Hymn.
Benediction.

Baptist Church
At 10 a. m. the Sunday school will hold special Easter services with a program.
Easter concert, 11 a. m.
Processional.
Junior and Senior chorus, "Triumphantly Sing."
Hymn.
Prayer.
Offertory.
Junior and Senior chorus, "Hosanna in the Highest."
Senior chorus, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away."
Mrs. J. L. Johnson, solo, "On Calvary Hill."
Ladies' quartette, Mrs. Roat, Edgerton, Hackett and M. Taylor, "From Glory to Calvary."
Mildred Taylor, solo, "Night With in the Garden."
Chester Edgerton, solo, "Alleluia, Death Is Conquered."
Senior chorus, "Why Seek Ye the Living Among the Dead."
Marie Kerley, solo, "Easter Day Has Crowned Him King."
Men's chorus, "Hail, Thou Glorious Easter Morning."
Senior chorus, "Forever With The Lord."
Junior and senior chorus, "The Lord Is Risen Indeed."
Benediction.

Evening service 7:30 p. m.
Processional.
Song service.
Junior choir, "Precious Story."
Chester Britten, cornet solo.
Women's Chorus, "The Angels' Song."
Sermon, Rev. F. E. Dark, "Giving God a Chance."
Baptismal service.

St. Anne's Catholic Church
St. Anne's Catholic church will conduct their Easter services at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

St. Luke's Episcopal
St. Luke's Episcopal church will conduct their regular morning services, with special Easter observance.

Church of the Brethren
The young people and children of the Church of the Brethren have prepared a special Easter program from the 11 o'clock service.

Bethany Presbyterian
Bethany Presbyterian young people will conduct a Sunrise Service in the church parlors at 7 o'clock. The regular Easter services will be held in the morning at 11 o'clock and a Vesper service will be held at 4:30.
Morning Worship, 11 a. m.
Prelude, "Easter Lilies", Henry Tolhurst.
Doxology, Invocation (all standing).
Hymn 244, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today."
Scripture Lesson, Mark 16:1-15.
Anthem, "Sing With All the Sons of Glory", P. A. Schaecker.
Baptismal Service.
Reception of New Members.
Hymn 246, "Alleluia! Alleluia! Alleluia!"
Offertory, "Quietude", Louis Gregh.
Solo, "The Bells of Easter Day" by Dressler, Mrs. C. B. Marks.
Sermon, "The Mystery of Easter" 2 Peter 1:16, F. Gordon Hart.
Communion Hymn 292, "Break Thou the Bread of Life."
Sacrament of Lord's Supper, Benediction, (Congregation seated, followed by silent prayer).
Postlude, "Easter Air", E. F. Hoamer.

Vesper Service, 4:30 p. m. Easter Concert.
Prelude, "Kingdom Eternal", Claude Meredith.
Carol, "Have You Heard the Wonderful Story", P. A. Schaecker.
Invocation.
Male Quartet, "Hallelujah! Christ Is Risen", W. O. Perkins.
Solo, "The Resurrection" Shelley, Mrs. A. G. Knapp.
Hymn 234, "The Day of Resurrection".
Anthem, "Te Deum in E Flat" Klein.
Offertory, "Easter Reverie", Theodore Weptach.
Address, "Seeking the Living Among the Dead", Luke 24:5, F. Gordon Hart.
Violin Solo, Robert Neilson.
Anthem, "Rejoice O Sons of Earth, Rejoice", Frank L. Eyer.
Benediction, (Congregation seated, followed by silent prayer).
Postlude.

Church of God
At the morning service, a special Easter program of readings and anthems has been prepared by the young people of the church. The pastor will give a short address. Two ordinance meetings will be held in the afternoon at 2:30.

St. Luke's Church
(Episcopal)
Easter Day.
Evening service at 7:30 o'clock.
Rev. Philip K. Hammond, Vicar in Charge.

Salvation Army
Special Easter Services.
11 a. m., subject "Our share in Christ's Resurrection."
8 p. m., subject "Love's Wounds".
Sunday school, 2:30 p. m.
Y. P. L. 6:30 p. m.
Other services on Thursday and Saturday nights at 8 p. m.
Hall at 405 G Street.
You are always welcome.
Captain O. P. Strickland, Officer in Charge.

Church of God
Corner J and Third Streets
Sunday school meets at 9:45 a. m.
At the morning service a beautiful Easter program of readings and anthems has been prepared by our young people. While the pastor will give a short address upon the theme of "The Stone Rolled Away."
In the afternoon at 2:30 p. m. two ordinance services will be held. The communion service or Lord's Supper and feet-washing.
Young people's meeting at 6:30 p. m. Subject "The Trial of the Life Family."
Evening service at 7:45 p. m. If you have neglected the spiritual part of your being and feel real hungry for spiritual food our Easter service will give you a full meal.
Start the "Go to Church" habit today and things will go more "right" during the week.
Wm. B. Hawkins, Pastor.

Baptist Church
Bible School at 10, Easter program in charge of Mrs. Vannice.
Recitation, "Day of Days", Chas. Vannice.
Song, Lois Edgerton and Ruth Hackett.
Recitation, "The Sermon of the Lily", Mintie Wilhelm.
Flower Drill, Phyllis Johnson and the Beagle Twins.
Easter's Here, Four of the primary boys.
Piano Duet, Dorothea and Marguerite Roat.
Primary Song.
Violin Solo, "Herbert Dillingham."

Church of the Brethren
229 E Street
Bible school 10 a. m.
The young people and children have prepared a special Easter program for the 11 o'clock service.
Junior and Senior Christian Workers' meeting 7 p. m.
Preaching 8 p. m. Subject, "The Credibility of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ."
Prayer meeting Thursday, 8 p. m. Strangers are always welcome at the "Little White Church."
Hiram Smith Pastor.

Free Methodist Church
250 West I St.
Quarterly meeting in session conducted by Rev. W. E. Goode, district elder, also C. B. Davis, of Medford. Services tonight at 7:30.
Sunday—Sunday school at 10 a. m. Preaching 11 a. m., 2:30 and 7 p. m.
Weekly services Wednesday evening at Merlyn, Thursday evening at F. M. parsonage. Come and worship with us.
W. S. Walker, pastor.

Newman Methodist Episcopal Church
Easter candle lighting service at 6 a. m. The program for this meeting is being prepared by the young people which insures a good meeting but all are invited.
The Sunday school program by the school will be at 10 a. m. A fine program has been prepared. Come to Sunday school on time and go directly to your classes. The assembly of the school will be called for the program. Come prepared to make a special Easter offering for missions. Baptism of infants and adults and the reception of children into the membership of the church will take place in the closing of the Sunday school.
The Melita Commandery, Knights Templar will attend in a body and participate in the 11 o'clock service. The sermon theme is, "Easter, the Life of the Nations." The choir will sing, "Now is Christ Risen" by Fearis, and Mrs. J. R. Thompson will sing a solo entitled, "Alleluia" by Norris.
In the evening at 7:30 the choir will give a cantata entitled "The Gospel of Easter" by Fearis, assisted by Mr. A. K. Cass, Mr. James Lium and Robert Neilson, Jr., directed by Mrs. J. R. Thomson, Miss Louise English, pianist.

St. Anne's Catholic Church
St. Anne's Catholic church will conduct their regular morning services, with special Easter observance.

Recitation, "All Little Ones Love Easter," Helen Entriken.
Song by the Junior Class.
Morning service, Full Easter program in charge of Mrs. McCabe.
Afternoon service at Merlyn at 2:30.
B. Y. P. U. at 6:30.
Evening service at 7:30. Special Easter music. Sermon by Rev. F. F. Dark, followed by the ordinance of baptism.

Free Methodist Church
250 West I St.
Quarterly meeting in session conducted by Rev. W. E. Goode, district elder, also C. B. Davis, of Medford. Services tonight at 7:30.
Sunday—Sunday school at 10 a. m. Preaching 11 a. m., 2:30 and 7 p. m.
Weekly services Wednesday evening at Merlyn, Thursday evening at F. M. parsonage. Come and worship with us.
W. S. Walker, pastor.

St. Anne's Catholic Church
Sunday mass at 9 o'clock.
Rev. S. A. Conpal, pastor.

Mary Succeeds on Main Street
By LAURA MILLER
© 1923, by Laura Miller

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE YARDS
"Main Street can't train girls to earn a living," is a plaint that runs through thousands of letters, in one wording or another, from girls who seek careers. True, it is that courses in biology, in art, in medicine, are not to be found at any crossroads. But suppose a fury of desire to paint people—or to cut them up and re-model them nearer to good health's desire—doesn't drive Mary off Main Street? Shall she forsake family and friends and all the comfortable, homely things one grows up with, for a casual career? If one's just the average girl, may not the little home town job, where a conscientious worker learns something of everything, help out if the great test comes?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Mary Succeeds on Main Street
By LAURA MILLER
© 1923, by Laura Miller

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE YARDS
"Main Street can't train girls to earn a living," is a plaint that runs through thousands of letters, in one wording or another, from girls who seek careers. True, it is that courses in biology, in art, in medicine, are not to be found at any crossroads. But suppose a fury of desire to paint people—or to cut them up and re-model them nearer to good health's desire—doesn't drive Mary off Main Street? Shall she forsake family and friends and all the comfortable, homely things one grows up with, for a casual career? If one's just the average girl, may not the little home town job, where a conscientious worker learns something of everything, help out if the great test comes?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

F. L. COON

Candidate for Republican Nomination

FOR COUNTY CLERK

of Josephine County

PRESENT INCUMBENT

Primaries May 16, 1924

(Paid Advertisement)

First Church of Christ Scientist
Christian Science services are held every Sunday in the W. O. W. hall, at 11 a. m., Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock. The subject for Sunday is "Doctrine of Atonement."
Reading room at 905 "E" street is open from 3 to 5 p. m. daily excepting Sunday and holidays. The public is cordially invited to attend the services and to visit the reading room.

St. Anne's Catholic Church
Sunday mass at 9 o'clock.
Rev. S. A. Conpal, pastor.

Mary Succeeds on Main Street
By LAURA MILLER
© 1923, by Laura Miller

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE YARDS

"Main Street can't train girls to earn a living," is a plaint that runs through thousands of letters, in one wording or another, from girls who seek careers. True, it is that courses in biology, in art, in medicine, are not to be found at any crossroads. But suppose a fury of desire to paint people—or to cut them up and re-model them nearer to good health's desire—doesn't drive Mary off Main Street? Shall she forsake family and friends and all the comfortable, homely things one grows up with, for a casual career? If one's just the average girl, may not the little home town job, where a conscientious worker learns something of everything, help out if the great test comes?

Let me tell you the story of Mary Marshall of Marshalltown, Ind. It was early in 1919. War brides were hurrying to meet transports from France. Fathers in khaki were losing their look born of horrors as they gazed upon miraculous little sons that recalled their own before-the-war selves.
Mary Marshall, nee Hopkins, had just come to Washington for a job that would support herself and John, Jr. She and John, Sr., had run the railroad and village telegraph office until 1918. Then she had abruptly become Mrs. Marshall and sole operator. She was a competent worker, evidently. And she knew she was releasing not merely a man, but her man for war service. When John, Jr., arrived she gave up work and lived with Father and Mother Marshall.
The day Mary came to me—I was running Uncle Sam's employment office in Washington just then—I tried to send her back to Marshalltown. She had a home. She had a baby to take care of. And she was—so I told her—practically untrained. Hadn't she come straight from the corner of Main Street and Railroad Avenue?

Mary Marshall wouldn't go back to Marshalltown. After a generous portion of stupidity on my part and of shyness on hers, the story came out. John, Sr., was in a Washington hospital, shell-shocked. His chances for sanity lay in seeing Mary and John, Jr., every day. A job was found for Mary as correspondence clerk in the telegraph division of the United States Railroad administration. It was no charity job, either. "There isn't anything she didn't learn something about in that little dump of an office in the railroad yards," her chief said later. "She's all to the good."
For obvious reasons, Mary Marshall and Marshalltown aren't her real name and address. But the story is real to the core.

Not large, but—
A rather awkward-looking individual went into an ice cream parlor the other day and bought an ice cream cone. He went out on the sidewalk to eat it. Presently he reappeared with the cone emptied of the cream, and, handing it to the astonished clerk, said: "Thank you for the vase."

Are Your Reading

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In the Grants Pass and Josephine Bank window. Each day these cards are changed. If you watch in the window of the Grants Pass and Josephine Bank these cards will give you some very valuable suggestions.

Read them each day.

Beat the Flies Screen Today

It is so much easier, more economical and more sanitary to keep the Flies out by Screening early than it is to wait until they are in and then have to get them out.

Get the very special prices we are offering on Window and Door Screens ready to use, also on the Screening by the yard.

Valley Hardware

W. D. Fry

Phone 14-R

Follow the Crowds

TO CHURCH

EASTER

BETHANY CHURCH INVITES YOU

Third at E Street