THE BAND UNIFORMS

The city band is to have uniforms. Just how good these uniforms are to be depends upon the people of the community, whom the band represents and who must necessarily support the organization. Already $359 has been raised by the business men who are behind the band. But that amount is not sufficient to purchase uniforms good enough for the Grants Pass band. Several hundred dollars yet are to be raised and some means must be taken to provide that alumni within the next few days.

The city council will probably make a donation tonight. Such a move would meet the approval of the city people who every summer attend the weekly band concerts. If the committee has missed anyone, they will be glad to accept even small donations.

There is one thing we can say for George Baker. He does not say he will cut taxes in two. He takes a different attitude and says he will get industries to help pay. That's a lot more sensible than the bunk pulled by some of the sob-sisters now holding office in the state.

Meanwhile Senator McNary appears to be sitting tight at Washington working for Oregon.

Constantinople will remain dry until the repeal of the prohibition law by the National Assembly.

Chicago, April 30.—Pacifism has reared its head in Chicago.

Schools and colleges are split into bitter factions; dissension is threatened in churches; indignation meetings are called by members of the American Legion and other patriotic organizations; action by the police and federal authorities is being demanded to deal with a threat to overrun the nation with an anti-war sentiment fostered by little groups of the cognoscentia in colleges, churches, and clubs.

It is openly boasted by members of the pacifist groups here that recent outbreaks of pacifist sentiment are not the expression of a small group of idealists, but rather part of a world-wide student movement that had its origin in the anti-conventional Wandergrovel group, which proved such a powerful factor in Germany.

Twenty thousand college men and women in the United States already are enrolled in "The National Student Forum of America," is the claim of leaders of the movement here. "The ordinary American has no idea of how our movement has spread in this country," William Bernhart, pacifist leader, declared. "It is running like wildfire throughout the student bodies all over the United States."

The National Student Forum, he declared, already is planning the establishment of "student groups" in the large industrial cities of the country. Gary, Ind., and Pittsburgh, Pa., have been under consideration as places for the introduction of such groups, he said.

These groups, he explained, will work in the industries, learning the conditions under which the workers live and will devote their spare time to reorganizing their city's social order in accordance with the forum's need of economics. Workers, of course, will be taken in as members of the group, he added.

The pacifist movement here was first brought sharply to public attention in March, when persons attending a meeting in the First Methodist church at Evanston, at which Brent Dow Allison, convicted draft dodger, spoke. At that time the meeting almost broke up in a riot when several of the people became violently opposed to the speaker's theories and demanded an American flag be unfurled on the platform.

The call against pacifism was immediately taken up throughout Evanston, Chicago and the surrounding territory. Others took up cud-

"For seven years the people have borne with uncomplaining courage the tremendous burden of national and local taxation. These must both be reduced."

—Calvin Coolidge.

els for the organization. Counter meetings were called to protest against the pacifist movement.

At Northwestern University a number of students became outspoken in their support for the forum. Church and school heads held consultations over the situation and promised disciplinary measures against the ringleaders.

Orville Roberts Hirsch, a conscientious objector during the war, came quickly to the fore as a leader in the pacifist movement and flung into the teeth of the body's adversaries the statement that those who signed the pledge not to fight for their country under any circumstances "will keep that pledge if it costs them their liberty or life."

Four hundred students in St. Cyril's College here soon after unanimously adopted resolutions condemning "students in all and any institutions who subscribed to pledges of disloyalty to their country in time of war."

This was quickly followed by a movement at Northwestern University whereby all students were asked to sign pledges of allegiance to their country. The signing of the pledges became a momentous affair. There were demonstrations threatening violence to those who would not sign on the dotted line.

Conditions were not in the least bettered when reports came from St. Louis that the pacifists, or "The National Student Forum of America," has started a junior organization among the school children and factory girls in that city. The organizers declared a hundred or so had already applied for membership.

Meanwhile, Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal church, declared he was not a pacifist, nor was he in sympathy with pacifist schemes to use the churches to forward their schemes. Bishop Nicholson told a committee of past commanders of the American Legion who called to ask if he sanctioned, or the Church approved, the speaking of Allison, the convicted draft dodger, before the Epworth League in the Evanston church.

The ordinance provides for some radical changes in the parking of machines on Sixth street and on side streets. Another question to be brought up will be that of the sewer and dump ground.

unparalleled in the history of this section of the country left a path marked by desolation and wreckage roughly estimated at more than 1,000 miles in length.

Human beings, including several children, were picked up as if they had been papers and hurled hundreds of feet through the air; houses, barns, public buildings were smashed into kindling after being lifted from their foundations; numbers of livestock met death in the wreckage; trees were uprooted and hundreds of miles of telephone and telegraph wires were torn down.
