COOLIDGE AND DAWES

The names of Coolidge and Dawes, linked together on the Republican ticket, cannot fail to carry the party to victory in November. Coolidge was the unanimous choice of the Republicans, with the exception of a few LaFollette supporters who sulked throughout the convention.

The record of Calvin Coolidge during his governorship of Massachusetts and later as vice-president, from which he succeeded to the presidency, is well known. He has dealt with action, rather than words and has earned the esteem and respect of the American people. He does what he believes to be right.

The record of Charles Dawes is not so well known although he has figured prominently in the news columns during the past few years. He first began to show up in the headlines when he was appointed director of the budget and effected sweeping reductions in government administration. Efficiency in operation was made the object of the working of the budget bureau and savings amounting to nearly $300,000,000 were credited to the bureau.

The Dawes ancestry runs back to William Dawes who came to America in 1625 with the first body of Puritans to Boston and Salem, Mass. Another William Dawes, born in 1745 was known as "William Dawes, the Patriot" and is recorded as the companion of Paul Revere on the latter's historic ride in the Revolution. "Hotels for unfortunates, where 'bath, bed and breakfast' was provided for ten cents, were established in Chicago by General Dawes as a memorial to his father. During one period of two months in 1915, 27,651 men were cared for at the hotel. A similar institution for women was founded later.

The Coolidge-Dawes ticket will carry the country this fall with as sweeping a majority as has ever been given. No other party will be able to secure two such men for their standard bearers. It is another case of an able vice-president who will be able to take the reins of government should occasion demand.

Tomorrow is Flag Day and every store and home in Grants Pass should have Old Glory on display. This day is one on which honor should be paid the flag. By honoring the flag, the people of the country are merely demonstrating their patriotism for those principles for which the flag stands. No merchant should be without a flag up tomorrow.

American Girls Ecally

Best Dancers in World

"The American girl makes the best dancer in the world, bar none."

That is the sweeping statement made by Miss Fawn Gray of New York, herself a dancer, who has just completed a "round-the-world" trip, during which she studied dancing in various cities, according to the New York World.

"Next to the American girl comes the English girl for all-around dancing," continued Miss Gray. "I danced in London, in Paris, at Monte Carlo and at Deauville, and, strangely enough, there was more real competition in London than at any other place. In Berlin the girls are a little too stiff for graceful dancing."

"You'd imagine that the French girls would be the most graceful and accomplished in showing off their dresses, wouldn't you? Well, while I was there a competition was held to decide the best manikin in Paris, and it was won by an American girl."

Miss Gray visited Honolulu on her trip, and while there danced Hawaiian dances in competition with real Hawaiians.

"I won all three of the contests in which I took part," she concluded, "so that alone would tend to bear out my contention that the American girl is the best dancer in the world, now wouldn't it?"

Dig Up Skulls of Indian Warriors

Amateur archeologists are as numerous around Fox Lake, Ill., just now as spring robins or bluebirds. It all came about with the discovery of an Indian burial mound right in the midst of the "hot dog" stands that cluster around Pistakee bay, 50 miles northwest of Chicago. So far nine skulls and enough bones to form a pile two feet high have been dug up. From the position in which the bones were lying, it is believed the Indians were buried in a trench following a battle.

CAMPAIGN FOR COOLIDGE

can forces. In 1921-1922 he served as the first Director of the Budget in the administration of President Harding. In the two latter posts his battle cry was coordination, and in both he carried the day—in France with a unified system of supply for the allied armies, and in America with a central bureau of control for governmental expenditures.

General Dawes went to France in August, 1917, as a colonel in the 17th Engineers. He was for a time associated with General Atterbury in transportation work, and then stationed at General Headquarters as a member of General Pershing's Administrative Staff. His next advance was to the place of general purchasing agent for the American forces with the rank of Brigadier General, and membership on the Military Board of Allied Supply. After the armistice he acted on the United States Liquidation Commission for several months, returning to Chicago August 3, 1919, after an absence of 26 months. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal of the United States, named a Commander of the Legion of Honor of France, decorated by Marshal Foch in Paris with the French War Cross. The Honorary Degree of Doctor of Civil Law was conferred on him by Marjetta College in 1921.

General Dawes was widely remembered for his appearance in February, 1921, before a Committee of the House of Representatives investigating the conduct of the war. Puncturing his remarks in spots with the emphasis of a teamster, and with little effort to temper the vehemence of his feelings, he scored the inquiry with blunt verbal broadsides which virtually terminated the activities of the investigators.

"Hell Maria," an expletive several times repeated during his testimony, long was associated with the general's name, and for many years he was referred to by his friends as "Hell Maria Dawes."

He was prominently mentioned for the Illinois senatorial candidacy in 1920, but refused to enter the race. He was understood, also, to have been considered for a post in the Harding cabinet the same year, which he also refused.

In June, 1921, following the enactment of the McCormick Budget bill, General Dawes was named first Director of the Budget, in charge of all regular appropriation bills for the operation of the government. He accepted the place with the understanding that he would resign in one year. An account of the period from the general's book, "The First Year of the Budget in the United States," shows a reduction in expense of approximately $1,600,000,000 in 1922, as compared with the previous year. The conduct of the routine business of the government was shown to have cost $907,500,000 less, due to the discharge of war-time personnel in all departments, and a saving of between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000 was credited to the operation of the Budget Bureau.

One of the director's first acts in his new post was to assemble about 600 department heads and bureau chiefs in the capitol and ask them to raise their hands and pledge a reduction in their jurisdictions during the new fiscal year. Some months later, he took several of the number to task publicly for their "slack cooperation" in behalf of economy in government. His aim in the Budget Bureau, he said, was to "put the government on a business basis." To this end he transferred supplies from one department to another, and otherwise effected economies which seemed new in governmental operations. On one occasion, considerable publicity was given the order to transfer a number of tea-pots from the Shipping Board to the Department of the Interior. The Board had an abundance, and the Department had requisitioned a quantity for Indian reservations. Through the Budget Bureau the transfer was made, and the saving credited to the Bureau.

The Radiometer

An instrument by which radiant heat and light may be directly converted into mechanical energy is an invention of Sir William Crookes. It consists of an exhausted globe of glass in which is a needle support carrying a rotating four-disk vane, the faces being blackened on one side. Placed in a field of light, the blackened side of each disk absorbs more of the radiant energy than the other side, and the molecules of residual air that strike it are thus given greater energy. The resulting pressure does not become quickly equalized for the two sides, as would be the case in air of the ordinary density, hence the vane rotates. An adaptation of the Crookes radiometer has been devised by Nichols of sufficient sensitiveness to detect the radiant heat of some of the fixed stars.

ATHLETES TRY OUT TODAY FOR EVENT

Boston, June 13.—(I. N. S.)—The business of separating the cream from the milk of America's track and field resources began today and will end tomorrow, at the Harvard Stadium, with the holding of the final and ultimate tryouts for the American Olympic team. Only the finest athletes within the gift of American track and field sports will be eligible. Given favorable weather, records will be worth a dime a dozen, or slightly less.

Those in most serious danger are listed as follows, in the order of their vulnerability: Sixteen-pound shot put, the discus throw, the running broad jump, the 400-metre hurdles, the high jump, the 800-metre run and the 100 and 200 metre dashes.

Joie Ray, Jimmy Connelly, Ray Buker and Lloyd Hahn, for instance, will go to the post in a heart-quicken-rush through 1,500 metres, but none of them seem to have the speed necessary to get under Paavo Nurmi's record for the distance. Neither can America figure to produce distance runners capable of beating the 5,000 and 10,000-metre standards, nor a walker worthy of record time at the Olympic distance.

And, by the same token, none of our pole vaulters have shown capabilities that approach Hoff's record, our high hurdlers seem to be equally inept when considered in comparison with Thomson, Simpson, Kelly and others who have gone before; our 400-metre men appear to be neither Merediths nor Reidpaths; and the American javelin throwers, while improving, are yards off the best performances by the Finns.

That ends the sad part of the tale, however. At the intercollegiate, two weeks ago, Glenn Hartranft and Ralph Hills finished a fraction of an inch apart in the shot put, with record-breaking tosses, and in the early season Hartranft was just a half inch shy of Ralph Rose's world record. He has beaten it in practice and may do so officially today or tomorrow. Hartranft already has the world's record for the discus to his credit.

In the running broad jump Hubbard, Comis and Rose have beaten 24 feet consistently throughout the season, with the first two ranging well up around 25 feet. Another inch or so, and the old record will be no more.

Another mark in chancery is the fifty-four seconds of Frank Loomis for the 400-metre hurdles. Ivan Riley already has beaten it a second or more, and tomorrow he must run around no less than Brookins, of Iowa, greatest low hurdler the sport has known, in order to win. The distance is now to Brookins, but he is deemed not only to have the speed but the strength to go on beyond his normal stretch of 220 yards.

Ray Watson, having come back like a bad check, is reckoned to run close to Meredith's record for 800 metres, particularly since he will be chased into the tape by such as Helfrich, Enck, Watters, Marsters and other hasty gents. Watson beat 1:53 less than two weeks ago.

Paddock, Murchison, Hill, Bowman and other stars will match shanks in the sprints, with the chances favoring a new record at 200 metres. Paddock holds the present mark at 21 1-5, but since the distance is two yards short of 220 yards it would seem as though the field might be capable of better things than that. The 100-metre mark is about as low as human legs can make it, however.
