WHAT IT MEANS TO THE FARMER

It is the opportunity to get together, see what the other fellow has been able to do, get his ideas and give him yours, to your mutual benefit. The inspiration received by both experienced and young farmers is inestimable. It inspires them to produce a little better result than they have ever done before. If you, Mr. Farmer have been able to produce a certain crop a little better than the average, bring in an exhibit, there is always a pride in achievement. Perhaps you can tell some other farmer who has had a mediocre success with this particular crop how to grow it successfully. It may be that he can reciprocate by giving you information on some crop on which your success has been limited. Also, the wife will enjoy meeting and visiting with other farmers' wives and exchange ideas on the part of farm life that falls to her lot.

New methods of doing things, new machinery, and other new ideas can be discussed and investigated. Methods of feeding that have brought success in the dairy, with the chickens and with the hogs.

And then beside the benefit you may gain there is the good time you are sure to have. You owe it to yourself and your family. Ample entertainment features have been provided for every day of the fair. The livestock exhibits will be an inspiration.

WHAT IT MEANS TO THE MERCHANT

The fair affords the merchant an opportunity to meet his country customers and others who might be developed into customers to the benefit of both. It opens the way to a better understanding between the various interests of the county and makes for a better feeling all around. It gives the out-of-town folks a chance to do some shopping and at the same time affords the merchant a chance to offer inducements that will make it worth while for people to visit his store during the fair.
