OREGON WEATHER

Pacific Coast States: California: Fair weather in interior; considerable cloudy and foggy weather near the coast; normal temperature. Oregon: and Washington: Considerable cloudiness and normal temperature with probability of widely scattered showers. Fire weather hazard will remain high in the interior of California and normal in Oregon and Washington.

Cloudy tonight and Tuesday; probably rain in west portion. Today's temperature, 86. Water at the bathhouse, 74.

EVENTS OF THE DAY

The long looked for rain, so much desired by the sportsmen, has arrived, but it looks as if it won't do them much good. Governor Pierce has not yet made up his mind to rescind his order closing the hunting for 30 days. With rain following 24 hours after his proclamation, hunters are inclined to feel that luck is against them. However, they will probably make it warm for Mr. Pierce if a heavy rain falls and no order is forthcoming.

Laws are excellent things when tempered with discretion, but when imposed literally and without the use of discretion, are apt to prove burdensome and do not serve the purpose for which they are intended. The clause in the traffic ordinance which prohibits parking cars after 1 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock is a good thing. It does not keep the streets in constant usage as a garage and also lessens thief risk. But when local business men, leaving their cars outside on the streets until they can go home, find them tagged, the law is not functioning as it is meant. Literally carried out, the law would prohibit the parking of a car in front of a cafe or confectionery for even a short period. Such is not the intention and the law should not be imposed in that manner.

The first serious accident to the American round-the-world flight occurred today. The aviators were attempting to make the flight to the southwest coast of Greenland and were heavily laden. It was fortunate that the intrepid fliers were uninjured. If it is at all possible, they will complete their epoch making flight this season, as shown by their determination to make the hop-off despite the many hazards.

London, Aug. 18.—(I. N. S.)—The clock-work regularity of the British court is threatened with disruption, and all because of great expectation of a happy event in Goldsbrough Hall, Princess Mary's Yorkshire home.

For the last sixty years the court has moved to the seclusion of Balmoral Castle in the last days of July. This year the court pilgrimaged to Scotland awaits the arrival of a tiny visitor.

It may be September before King George and Queen Mary cross the Tweed. The king will linger at Bolton Abbey to be in the neighborhood and the queen will stay at Goldsbrough Hall.

During the London season the queen has daily chatted with the princess by telephone.

Continental trains are bringing herds of Americans to London for Paris and the summer heat of Italy. Even the prospects of rain in England fail to dampen the ardor of the Americans who have attempted to brave the heat of Southern Europe.

Many Americans are in Scotland for the shooting season.

Scottish shooting lodges have been rented to Americans for huge figures. Mr. and Mrs. Burling, of White Plains, N. Y., have taken Foray Lodge, in Perthshire, and not far away are Mr. and Mrs. C. Ramsdell, of Boston and Chicago, who have rented a moor from the Marquis of Graham.

Mrs. Harry Brown, of Pittsburgh, who has made a successful entrée into London society, has decided not to take a lodge, but will make a short trip into Scotland. It is reported that Mrs. Brown's three months' lease of Norfolk House, London, is costing her $10,000.

London is a city of millionaires, thanks to the American tourists. Every luxury is being sought by the American tourists from the minute they leave their ship at Southampton until they depart.

Southampton's boys about town—the lads who always gather to see the trains come in and go out—are astounded at the latest innovation. A luxurious cream-colored coach is now added to every boat train.

The boys at first thought it was a royal coach for a royal visitor, but they discovered it's only a luxury coach provided for those arrivals who are going to the luxury hotels—Savoy, Berkeley and Claridge's, in London. They couldn't stand ordinary first-class or Pullman travel, so the Savoy people rigged up the luxury coach for their luxury guests. Someone will have to pay, and the Savoy management is nothing if not a business management.

The talk of London is the recent garden party which the king and queen gave to members of the American bar.

No such unconventional gathering has even been held at Buckingham Palace heretofore.

The king and the queen made themselves entirely at home with their American guests, and their guests certainly made themselves at home with the king and the queen.

"I'm pleased to meet you, George," a Middle-Western lawyer is quoted as saying in greeting the king. It was a novel greeting for the king, but he enjoyed it.

The director's stick—that elongated emblem of a graceful and more leisurely age—is coming back into favor in London. Wherever London's smart women foregather there are seen director's sticks. At the Berkeley, where the smart women hold their lunchtime parade, new ebony stands have been placed at the tables so that the sticks may be kept at a becoming angle throughout the meal.

Scarfs are still being worn in most fashionable Bond Street. The handkerchief scarf has given way to far more elaborate creations, and gaiety of the shopping hour is being increased by the gayest of colored scarfs.

PIRATES BECOMING DANGER TO LEADERS

New York, Aug. 18.—(A. P.)—After riding roughshod over the Braves, the Giants, the Dodgers and the Phillies on their eastern trip, the Pittsburgh Pirates loom today as the team the Giants will have to beat out to win their fourth straight pennant.

The Giants may thank their lucky stars and Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn's pitching luminary, that the Pirates were stopped at all. In turning in his eighteenth victory of the season, the Dodger crack allowed Pittsburgh only four hits and checked their winning spurt.

The Pirates had won 11 out of 12 games—four straight from the Braves, three out of four from the Giants, and three from Brooklyn—when Manager Robinson threw Vance into the breach. Pittsburgh knew defeat was almost inevitable, as Dazzy had trimmed them nine times in as many starts.

The brightest stars for the Pirates on their successful road trip were Emil Yde, who ran his string of victories up to eight, and Rabbit Maranville, who fielded and batted in sensational fashion.

McGraw considers the Pirates a stronger club than the Cubs. He has said all along that he feared Pittsburgh more than any other team in the league.

One reason why McGraw is alarmed by the spurt of the Pirates is that it is the only club that has won a majority of its games with the Giants. Of the fifteen games between the two teams, the Pirates have won nine. The Cubs are comparatively easy pickings for the champions. McGraw's men have won 11 games out of 16 from the Windy City club, capturing four straight on the last western trip and winning five out of six in the series just played.

The superiority of the Pirates over the New Yorkers this season is in marked contrast to last year, when the Giants won out because of their ability to defeat their leading rivals when pressed for the lead.

The Pirates have kept in the race this year despite the loss of Babe Adams, one of their aces last season, and the protracted batting slump of Traynor and Bigbee.

The excellent pitching of recruits Yde and Kremer has made up for the loss of Adams, however. Yde is now the league's leading hurler. Cuyler, the slugging outfielder from Nashville, has been the sensation of the league.

Only the collapse of the Cubs in their series against the Giants held the champions' lead intact while Pittsburgh was making its sensational run.

REDS WOULD START CLASS RULE IN U.S.

Washington, Aug. 18.—(I. N. S.)—Real cooperation between farmers and wage earners is not helped by the multitudinous fiascos in the field of so-called farmer-labor political effort, according to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

In a statement Gompers declared that the "convention held in St. Paul June 17, was an example of the kind of fraudulent farmer-labor pyrotechnics that hamper true cooperation between agriculturists and wage earners, because they tend to create misunderstandings on the one hand and arouse suspicion on the other."

"Who can be seriously blamed if after such a spectacle as that in St. Paul he concludes that talk of farmer-labor cooperation is futile or waste?" asked Gompers in the current issue of the American Federationist.

"There is a great and growing community of interest between the tillers of the soil and the wage earners of the cities, but that interest is not going to be served by the soap-box brigade that peddles its nostrums from almost every corner in these perilous times."

Gompers pointed out that "as producers, farmers and wage earners stand in precisely the same position. As consumers they also stand in the same position."

"In the great democracy of America there is no division along distinctly proletarian or class lines either political or industrial," Gompers declared. "There is a distinction between the useful and the useless, those who serve and those who are purely parasitic. That is quite different from a distinction along proletarian lines, the latter being one of the bogeys of the ridiculous communist propaganda."

Gompers feels that the kind of cooperation that American farmers and American wage earners want is the kind that leads to constructive betterment of American life for the masses of the American people.

"The St. Paul convention declared itself for a workers' and farmers' government which would mean the end of democracy in America," the veteran head of the American Federation said.

"Of course the reds set up the shout that we have always had a Wall Street government, and upon that assertion they partly rest their claim that it is right to get the other kind if they can."

"The argument is specious in the extreme. Granted that Wall Street has exercised a powerful and at times dominating influence upon American national government, there never has been any real bar to an ousting of that government or to popular influence on that government, or to a voice for everybody who could make himself heard—and it has never been a Wall Street government in the sense that the communists demand a workers' government."

"The machinery of democracy in political life has been and is available to the people, and they may take advantage of it as they choose and as they are able to unite on a program of action."

What the St. Paul platform proposes, according to Gompers, is "a capture of the government and its subsequent destruction. They want, he said, a government of those two groups alone—farmer and labor—to the exclusion of all others—a class government instead of a democratic government."

"Some Americans," Gompers went on, "are slow to learn the true meaning and purpose of communist propaganda. They are slow to believe that dictatorship of the proletariat means what it seems to mean. They are slow to believe that real destruction of democracy is intended. They are slow to believe that the communist machine is just as sinister and deadly as that it is in every country a part of an international organization dedicated to the destruction of democracy everywhere."

"The St. Paul convention has come and gone. Like every other move on the part of the communists, it has taught its lesson for those who are willing to learn."

Poem by Uncle John

There's many a smooth promoter of the get-rich-quick concern, — which wouldn't need "promotin'" if the stock was honest money that is any kinder missed, than the dollar that it costs a man to head the sucker list!

When a fellow gets to dreamin' of the life on easy street, he'll buck the game that promises to put him on his feet. . . . The "dotted line" in front of him—the pencil in his fist—the bait is easy swallered, so, he heads the sucker list!

I've done a heap of prayin' that the time would come to pass, when brains would stop the idiot from blowin' out the gas,—but I've wondered more here lately—if a well-directed fist to the point of anaesthesia—wouldn't end the sucker list! They lay it on the good old stork—there may be nothin' in it—but they say the old bird brings around a sucker every mornin'! I ain't believin' all I hear—I don't pretend to know, but jodgin' from the suckers caught, I half believe it's so!
