OREGON WEATHER

Pacific Coast States: The outlook is for fair weather and normal temperature except for considerable cloudiness and rain along the coast from northwest-ern California to Puget Sound.

Rain tonight and Sunday.

THE SEVEN STATE MEASURES

When the voters go to the polls next Tuesday they will find seven measures on the ballot. Three of these have been referred to the people of the state by the legislative assembly, one has been referred by petition of the people and three were initiated by petition of the people of the state.

The income tax law should be repealed. The detrimental effect of the tax on the industry of the state has already been fully explained and a vote of "yes" should be given on that measure, insuring the repeal.

The bonus amendment which will extend the provisions of the state soldier bonus to female employees of the war department, who served during the World war, and to veterans of the Spanish-American war, should be given an affirmative vote. It is just that these veterans receive recognition by the state.

The oleomargarine and condensed milk bill is for the upbuilding of the dairy industry of the state. It is so fully understood that further explanation is unnecessary. A vote of "yes" should be given.

On the voters' literacy test amendment, a vote of "yes" will undoubtedly have the effect of making the citizens of this country take a greater interest in the English language, too little understood by many of them. Anything that will tend to induce the citizen of foreign birth to Americanize himself is good.

On the other three, their value is too slight to justify their passage. A vote of "no" is advised.

VOTE FOR TOM KAY

The Republicans of Oregon are given the opportunity at the coming election to regain virtual control of the state administration, through the election of Thomas B. Kay as state treasurer. The Pierce administration has been far from satisfactory. In fact it has been detrimental to the best interests of Oregon. The people of the state can end the Pierce machine politics by placing Kay in the office of treasurer, giving the Republican party two votes on the board of control, now dominated by Pierce, through the seating of Jefferson Myers, democrat. Spike the Pierce control by voting for Thomas B. Kay.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

Gossip of Staff Correspondents at World Centers of Population

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 1.—(I. N. S.—Uncle Tom, once memorable candidate for the hog pen, established a striking contrast to the late Uncle Tom Mason, of Fort Worth, who in the three score and eight years since little Eva made the initial tear-wringing ascent with the aid of a block and tackle, has risen from the shackles of human chattel to bank president.

Born in slavery and coming to Texas from Tennessee 44 years ago, Uncle Tom Mason developed an early financial rating with numerous fair and track concessions. For years he had an active finger in the historical "illy white" and "black and tan" Republican party faction fights in Texas.

And with supremacy of the "illy white" wing, Uncle Tom came into not a little prominence and influence in Texas negro society until, 12 years ago, he became associated with W. M. McDonald in the latter's savings bank in Fort Worth.

With this institution Uncle Tom climbed to the presidency and at his death left an estate estimated at approximately a quarter million dollars, mainly in cash and negotiable notes.

Should one of San Antonio's school teachers break an arm in taking to task an undisciplined student or sustain general incapacities through championing such discipline before an irate parent, nothing is lost, for they are insured.

Blanket insurance totaling almost $1,000,000 has been placed on the teachers of the city by the school board, the first such course to be adopted in the country.

The death and accident policy amounts of $1,000 on each teacher in the city.

Youth may have it folly, but the eternal triangle found its way into the State Confederate Veterans' Home, claiming the life of J. W. Hassell, 85-year-old veteran, and the placing in jail of his former companion and war buddy, Charles C. Richart, 78.

Throughout the conflict of '61 Hassell and Richart fought side by side, sharing their meagre lot together and surviving the rigors of a short prison confinement and a half dozen major engagements to live and in after years cling together in a hard march through life.

Hassell would tell of the night Richart fought his way out on the battlefield where he had fallen and, under the menacing fire of Union "snipers," dragged him back to safety. And Richart would tell of the day when, prostrate with a broken leg, a negro trooper poised with a bayonet ready to thrust into his heart, the timely approach of Hassell preserved his life.

And so it was until a woman, a nurse of the civil war, whom they had both known, entered the Confederate home. Over her the two veterans were said to have shattered a life-long friendship and in the heat of an argument Richart struck Hassell over the head with his heavy cane. The next day the old veteran died.

Irrespective of its vast border, where a matter of inches involves two different worlds and a coastline over hundreds of miles, Texas is drier than any state in the union, according to federal prohibition agents as far as the traffic in pre-Volstead liquor is concerned.

Strict law enforcement both by border troops and coast guard cutters, and the lack of a ready market for the more expensive brand of smuggled spirits have given Texas a lead in comparison with other states, the agents informed Governor Neff.

Poem Uncle John

Of course, there may be reasons for a feller's upish ways, when the right to win distinction paves the road to better days,—and I don't begrudge my rival if he swaggers jest a bit—for, if I can't be magnanimous, I'll simmer down an' quit! And still—there is occasions when I'd criticize a friend, when the means he takes advantage of, don't justify the end; fer instance—here's Simp Wiggleton, who don't know "gee" from "haw"—he's learnt to play bull-fiddle in the Hickville Orchestra. . . . Now I don't envy Simp at all—for this here country's free,—and the world don't stop revolv'n' when he fails to speak to me—I only mention Simp's case to show how men may reap—if they seize the opportunity when glory comes so cheap!
