NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, in simple, clean, safe. Burns 34 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene (coal oil). The inventor, V. M. Johnson, 161 North Union Ave., Portland, Ore., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

AMUSEMENTS

Constance Talmadge Will Appear in "The Goldfish" at Rivoli "Constance Talmadge has the most expressive hands in filmdom," says Jerome Storm, who directed Constance in "The Goldfish." Director Storm ought to know, for he has the reputation among Hollywood directors of securing unusual emotional expression from his players' hands. "The Goldfish" will be shown at the Rivoli theatre' next week.

"Hands have always been my directorial hobby," says Storm. "Things can be said with the hands which even the eyes cannot express. When testing an actor or actress for a certain role I watch their hands. If they use them gracefully, expressively and intelligently I am then and there convinced that they are real artists.

"Constance Talmadge is unusually expressive with her hands. Without changing the expression of her eyes, or the pose of her head and body, Constance can get over her thoughts in a manner which instantly stamps her as a great artist.

"I delight in sitting back and watching Constance work. Only very seldom do I find it necessary to suggest bits of 'business' to her. Once she has glanced over the photo play script she goes through her role, using only her hands and eyes.

"After that I can sit down and enjoy her acting. She puts her whole self into her work and a dozen times a day has us roaring at her side-splitting mimicry. But constantly while she is before the camera I find myself watching her hands. They fascinate me with their unusual expressiveness."

"Open All Night" Will Be Seen at Rivoli Tonight Only

As far as picture plays go, "Open All Night" is something new. Here we have subtlety and charm intermingled with physical action and punch, fine humor and a highly entertaining story. And to top it all, a flawless cast. The outstanding feature of the film is the six day bike race around which the plot revolves, and which in itself is worth several times the price of admission.

The story deals with a young Parisian society matron who is bored to tears because of her husband's tame love-making. She craves a caveman tactics and one night decides to go in search of her ideal man. She finally finds him at the Winter Circus where the International Bicycle race is in progress, in the person of Petit Mathieu, a champion bicycle rider. Events take an unexpected turn when friend husband discovers her and starts acting as a caveman himself. And from that point on the film is an alternating of giggles, chuckles and laughs.

GRAVEYARD HAD ITS INCEPTION IN JOKE

Man's Jeating Proposal Carried Out by Companions.

On the great Warner ranch in San Diego county, Calif., a few miles from the hot springs resort, is a little cluster of seven graves. They are just off the frequently traveled road leading to Montezuma and San Felipe valleys, but are not visible from the road and very few of the residents of that section are aware of their existence. No fence surrounds them, and but for a few fragments of a single marble slab they would not be noticed by a pedestrian who might walk over them.

But in the origin of this little burying ground is a story of throbbing interest. The graves are on a knoll a few hundred feet back of the old Butterfield stage station in Buena Vista valley, one of the stopping places of what was the longest stage line in the world, extending from St. Louis to San Francisco, in operation before the Civil war.

Through the middle part of the little Buena Vista valley runs a clematis with a line of large cottonwood trees, affording water and shade to some of the many thousand sleek cattle which range the big ranch, says the Los Angeles Times. The stage station, built of adobe, with wooden "lean-to" and porch, was not only patronized by cross-country travelers, but was also a resort for the prospectors who thronged that region in the early days, and the cattlemen who looked after the herds in the surrounding territory. Saturday night always found a crowd of these rough-and-ready frontiersmen gathered at the station, where they spent the evening swapping stories, gambling, drinking and carousing generally.

On the Sunday morning following a particularly wild carousal, when all were partly stupefied from the night's orgy, some one remarked:

"Well, we done about everything; there was to do last night, but if anybody can start anything new we will do it now."

Said another, stretching himself and yawning: "Well, the only thing I can think of that we did not do was to start a graveyard."

"That's right," said the first speaker. "We did not do that, but we'll do it right now, and you'll be the one we'll start it with."

The new idea was welcomed by all except the one who suggested it. A range rider produced a rope, and the victim was escorted to a large sycamore tree a few hundred feet from the house. The rope was thrown over a limb, and, as they thought, adjusted about the man's neck so as not to strangle him—for no one really intended to take his life. Then he was hauled up into the air, and with much hilarity the rest of the company went into the house to breakfast, leaving the unfortunate victim of their practical joke helplessly dangling.

Returning to the sycamore tree after breakfast to release their companion from his uncomfortable position, they found him dead. In their befuddled condition they had bungled in adjusting the rope, and he had been choked to death.

After they had cut the body down and it was evident life could not be restored, a consultation was held, and it was decided, without inquest or other official action, to bury the body. It was taken to the top of the knoll back of the stage station, and then and there the graveyard was started, as its first occupant had suggested.

Vegetable Sponge Edible

In Algeria an extensive industry has been developed in the cultivation of what are known as vegetable sponges. The chief market for the product is Paris, although specimens are not uncommon in the United States. They have come into extensive use for the toilet, the bathroom and various other domestic purposes.

Prior to maturity the fruit is edible, but when the stage of ripeness has been passed the fibrous matter becomes separated from the pulp and forms a tough, spongy mass. The material is prepared for the market by being bleached in a weak lime bath.—Grit.
