ON REFORESTATION

President Coolidge today warned the nation that a timber shortage is faced at the present rate of consumption, stating that a specific program should be adopted for the reforestation of the wooded areas of the nation.

The American people have been blessed with a great supply of every natural resource. Faced with this apparently ever-lasting supply, especially of timber, the people of the country from the earliest pioneer to the present generation have been lavish in the use of the forest products.

Edgar Wallace, whose detective stories are widely read in the United States, has turned reformer, it would seem. He has written a biting article in the London Mail attacking a cult of well-known devotees whom he claims are indulging in vice, and he charges that one of the leaders of this set is "a pretty American woman" who has been virtually driven out of American society, but who is in high favor now in English society.

London, Nov. 10.—(I. N. S.)—King George has taken to spectacles, and horn rimmed spectacles, too, so perhaps the English cartoonist will now give Americans a rest and will no longer poke fun at them because they wear horn-rimmed spectacles.

Every English cartoonist has used the American with horn-rimmed glasses as a subject whenever he ran short of funny ideas, and it has been an unfailing laugh producer for the British. Now their king has adopted those spectacles, so perhaps the cartoonists will have to lay off.

The king, by the way, it is said, is merely wearing glasses to strengthen his eyes and is not suffering from any serious defect. His shooting is as perfect as ever, as his hunting companions will testify.

Mrs. Walter Chrysler and her daughter, Thomas, of Great Neck, L. I., have been in London at the Berkeley, putting the finishing touches on one of the most extensive treasuries of modern times. Miss Chrysler is to marry in Los Angeles this winter, and it is understood that she has spent $50,000 on her trousseau, which includes some precious Florentine lace work that was made for Catherine de Medici over 400 years ago.

Precious flowers worth anything from $5 to $100, are in great favor in London ballrooms. Orchids are the most favored. Lady Diana Cooper seems to have brought the orchid fad back with her from New York. So great is the demand for orchids that Pizani, one of the florists catering to the luxury trade, has secured a monopoly on the supply of an "orchid farm" on the tiny Channel island Heron. Some of these orchids are worth $250 each, but treated with care they may last three weeks or more.

Game Stands 13 to 3, in Favor of the Upper Valley Team
At the end of the first half today, the Ashland football team had rolled up 13 points against the Grants Pass warriors and the "Climate" boys had been able to gather in but three. The game, being played at Ashland, looked very much like an Ashland victory, according to information received at the Courier office at the end of the first half.

Training Women Doctors
The jubilee of the London (Royal Free hospital) School of Medicine for Women, part of the University of London, will be celebrated in October, says London Tit-Bits.

At the present time there are nearly 400 women students who pass on for their hospital training to the Royal Free hospital, the governors of which institution made possible from the first the training necessary for fully qualified women doctors.

This is the only center of medical training exclusively for women in the British empire, and today its medical students include women from eighteen countries. A thousand graduates of the London School of Medicine for Women are now practicing in various parts of the world.

Great Men
There is nothing strange about great men; they are like us, only deeper, higher, broader; they think as we do, but with more intensity; they suffer as we do, more keenly; they love as we do, more tenderly.—David Grayson.

GREEKS RETURNING TO THEIR COUNTRY

Washington, Nov. 10.—(I. N. S.)—Exchange of population between Greece and Turkey, as the result of an international agreement following the signing of the Lausanne convention, has resulted in about 1,100,000 refugees entering Greece and the repatriation of approximately 300,000 Turks.

This information has been made public by James H. Mood, of the European division of the department of commerce. "The application of this convention inevitably was attended by temporary difficulties for both countries, but the heavier part of the burden fell upon Greece, since the number of Greeks residing in eastern Thrace and of Greeks and Armenians in Anatolia were many times the number of Turks resident in western Thrace and other portions of Greece," Mood said.

Mood pointed out that it fell to the lot of the Greek government, assisted by such foreign relief agencies as the American Red Cross and the Near East Relief, to take care of the majority of the refugees returning to Greece. Most of them were practically destitute.

"It cost the Greek government $3,400,000 simply to transport the refugees from Asia Minor," Mood continued. "During the winter of 1922-1923 the American Red Cross fed about 800,000 refugees before it retired from the field. Many millions of dollars were spent for necessary food and clothing.

The peak of this relief work was reached in April, 1923, when 533,000 Greek nationals were being fed daily. The Near East Relief also saved thousands of lives through its child feeding during the same period."

Mood said that the council of the League of Nations came to the support of the Greek government, on condition that the Greek banks and bankers underwrite at least $1,000,000 for settling the refugees in permanent work. The Bank of England subscribed this sum.

Expenditures of money were controlled by a settlement commission consisting of two members appointed by the Greek government and two members named by the League of Nations. Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador of the United States to Turkey, was appointed chairman of the commission by the League of Nations.

The Greek government has promised not less than 1,200,000 acres of land for the refugees, to serve two purposes: As land for the refugees to settle upon and cultivate for the purpose of becoming self-supporting citizens of Greece; as a guaranty of the loan which the settlement commission administered.

The Turkish government was not seriously embarrassed by the exchange of population, according to department information. Of the Turkish refugees a majority had some capital on leaving Greece, and those without funds were settled on estates vacated by the Greeks when they left Turkey.

Hungarian Gypsy Music
Friendship Strained
The music of the Hungarian gypsy has been handed down from father to son for ages and is distinctive and traditional. They have their own instruments, the oldest of which is the Rackoczy pipe, a kind of small but rough oboe with a half walling, half humorous tone. It would appear to be as much Hungarian as gypsy, however, for the name is taken from that of a field outside Budapest, where at one time the kings of Hungary opened their parliament or riksdag. It seems likely that the instrument was used either for calling the members together or for ritual purposes connected with the ceremonies of the opening and closing of the parliament, and so was given the name of the place where it was utilized.
