TURNING BACK THE PAGES

50 YEARS AGO from the Democrat-Herald September 12, 1969

Gary Barton of Baker, a former Bulldog, will lead the Oregon State Beavers against UCLA Saturday night at Los Angeles. Barton's parents, Mel and Mrs. Barton, live at 3180 Grandview Ave.

25 YEARS AGO from the Baker City Herald September 12, 1994

The coolest weather in more than two months gave firefighters the help they needed over the weekend to stop the Twin Lakes fire almost in its tracks. The 19,440-acre fire, which was among 82 sparked in Northeastern Oreg. by lightning Aug. 28, gained just 20 acres Saturday and none Sunday.

10 YEARS AGO from the Baker City Herald September 11, 2009

Baker County will get $1.8 million in federal stimulus money to restore streamside ground on private and state lands, and share $2.2 million more to help ailing state and private forests.

ONE YEAR AGO from the Baker City Herald September 12, 2018

After a local couple complained about the matter last month, the Baker City Council on Tuesday approved the minutes from 10 past meetings dating to January of this year. Raymond and Penny Rienks broached the topic during the Council's Aug. 28 meeting, noting that councilors had not approved minutes from several meetings. Raymond Rienks is among the 10 candidates in the Nov. 6 election, when four of the seven City Council seats will be decided. City Recorder Julie Smith, who takes meeting minutes, said the delay in submitting minutes for councilors' approval stemmed from her dual role as human resources manager, which requires her to respond to personnel issues within a certain period. Smith, who has served in both roles since 2016, said it was a matter of finding the time to proof the draft version of the minutes and make them available to councilors for formal approval.

Clancey Boehm leads the way to a win for the boys competition against Jaxon Agard. Boehm eventually wins the overall championship against an adult competitor, second-grade teacher Morgan Colvin.

BLAZERS

Bosma also encouraged the students to encourage one another and to work together just as the Blazers do.

“So we need you guys to continue the awesome work you’re doing in this school being great teammates,” he said.

During the assembly in the Brooklyn gym, Bosma had four students participate in a competition. Two girls went first, followed by two boys.

The students ran from one side of the gym to the other, did 10 jumping jacks, ran back to the beginning side, did 10 jump rope cycles and then raced back on tricycles.

Originally, Bosma told the students he had asked Anderson send out his “spies” to find students who were paying attention in class, doing all of their assignments, and being respectful, a good friend, and encouraging their schoolmates.

He then told the students that Anderson had too many students to choose from and they decided to put the kids’ names in a hat and pulled out volunteers.

The two girls chosen to compete are second-grader Rogue Lunyou and first-grader Remington (Remi) McMurdo.

The Blazer Dancers helped the students keep track of how many jumping jacks and jump ropes they did, cheering them on with the other students.

Lunyou won the competition, and Bosma told the students: “I know one thing that’s really important about this school, whether we win or whether we lose, students in this school support one another.”

Bosma gave McMurdo a T-shirt for participating and the other students told her “good job” as she returned to her seat.

Following the girls were two boys, third-grader Clancey Boehm and second-grader Jaxon Agard. Boehm was the victor and Agard was given a T-shirt.

Boehm then won victory

“I know one thing that’s really important about this school, whether we win or whether we lose, students in this school support one another.”

— Todd Bosma, director of game operations for the Portland Trail Blazers, speaking to students at Brooklyn Primary on Monday over Lunyou before second-grade teacher Morgan Colvin and paraprofessional Megan McGuinness were picked to participate as well.

Colvin won and faced Boehm for the final round, where Boehm won again. All participants received a T-shirt.

Bosma told the students about the Rip City Rally and a little history of the Trail Blazers.

“Fifty years ago, the Trail Blazers started,” he said.

He went on to tell the students about the Blazers’ original radio broadcaster Bill Schonely, who coined the term “Rip City” to describe a shot that rips through the net, and franchise founder Harry Glickman, who traveled around the state “getting people excited and drumming up support for the Trail Blazers.”

“And so we’re recreating that now 50 years later,” Bosma said. “We’re doing the exact same thing and stop number one is right here in this school and we’re so excited that you guys are here today.”

Oregon State Police Accident reports

On Interstate 84 just south of Baker City; a Pontiac sedan driven by Edwin Feemster, 35, of Nampa, Idaho, told police he was traveling west in the right lane with his window down when he was hit in the eye by a bug. Police said Feemster drifted to the left and drove off the highway into the median. He overcorrected to the right and crossed both westbound lanes. His vehicle struck the guardrail on the right shoulder. Feemster was taken by ambulance to St. Alphonsus Medical Center for treatment of his injuries, police said. No information about his condition was available in time for this report.
