Boeing's 737 Max, both due to lower traffic and technical issues with the aircraft.

However, the global supply chain has been snarled by surging demand and ongoing COVID-19 infections.

"Supply chain disruptions continue to be a headwind, preventing a complete recovery to pre-pandemic levels," said Rubeela Farooqi, chief U.S. economist at High Frequency Economics.

Analysts at Contin-gent Macro said Monday's durable goods report "reveals significant volatility" in certain industries due to the supply chain troubles, which have been particularly acute in the delivery of computer chips.

Monday's report showed that demand for machinery and primary metals such as steel increased last month while orders for computers and related products dropped 1.4%.

Even with the weaker-than-expected orders in March, economists are forecasting a strong economic growth in the January-March quarter. The U.S. releases its first look at gross domestic product on Thursday. Forecasts put that rebound at 5% or better, with even stronger growth in the current quarter, which ends in June.

"As the economy reopens more broadly, industrial activity will continue to be propelled by strong tailwinds including large fiscal stimulus, buoyant demand and strong corporate profits," said Lydia Bous-sour, lead U.S. economist at Oxford Economics.

their reception. It's pretty cool."

He also does much commercial work, shooting advertisements for small businesses. His sister, Tosca Rawls, works at the Wall-owa Valley Center for Wellness, providing him an "in" there. Paper Street Enterprise has become the prime filmmaker and media company for the center. He also does work for other businesses.

"We do most anything, like if you go to the Minam store, or you go to Wallowa Valley Center for Wellness or Winding Waters River Expeditions up in Joseph on the river, it's people like that I create videos for of everyday life and making it cool," he said.

But it's the creative aspect of the business that fires Rawls up.

"It's a place where not only artists but anybody can come and bounce ideas and it will have, eventually, open work stations, plus places you can rent, a real interactive situation," he said. "I have my own office, but you can come to me and say, 'Hey, what do you think about this idea?' Because that's who I am. I'm a creative. I create ideas and then we try to push them."
