HALFWAY — Pine Fest, a music festival set in one of Baker County's smallest towns, returns this year for a one-day event on Saturday, Sept. 11, at the Pine Valley Fairgrounds in Halfway.

The music goes from 2-10 p.m. Admission is $25, and tickets are available online at brownpapertickets.com. Entry is free for children younger than 12.

After a one-year hiatus, Steve Backstrom tried contacting the same musicians for the 2021 show. Many weren't available.

"Then we created a new wish list, and we got everyone we asked on the first try," Backstrom said. "I feel like it's one of the strongest lineups talent-wise we've ever been able to present."

Coyote Willow kicks off the festival at 2 p.m. This folk/Americana duo features guitar, cello and bass.

Taking the stage at 4 p.m. is Steve Fulton Music, a five-piece band that plays original rock and Americana.

At 6 p.m., Never Come Down Band will fill the fairgrounds with the sounds of bluegrass.

The festival closes with Kris Deelane and the Hurt — a nine-piece rhythm and blues review.

Between these headliners, local talent will perform on the smaller stage.
