'CANDYMAN'

Rated R for bloody horror, violence, and language including some sexual references.

What it's about: A reboot/sequel of the 1992 horror film that features a terrifying ghost/monster with a hook for a hand and bees as his familiars, who will appear in the mirror if you say his name five times.

The kid attractor factor:

Teens may be attracted to this horror genre.

Good lessons/bad lessons: Be careful what you summon.

Violence: Some incredibly gory violence and slasher-style murders.

Language: Some swearing

Sex: An implied sex scene (no nudity)

Drugs: None

Parents' advisory: This is very scary and violent/bloody. Mature teens only.

Universal Pictures and MGM Pictures

RLJE Films
Elijah Wood and Luke Kirby in "No Man of God."

'NO MAN OF GOD'

No MPAA rating

What it's about: A drama that inspects the relationship between FBI profiler Bill Hagmaier and serial killer Ted Bundy.

The kid attractor factor: Not much — this is an adult drama

Good lessons/bad lessons: Actions have consequences that should be paid, no matter how much rhetoric goes into them.

Violence: References to and descriptions of stalking, rape and murder, crime scene photos (not graphic).

Language: Some swearing and strong language

Sex: References to rape and sexual violence, including images of pulpy detective magazines.

Drugs: None

Parents' advisory: This is an adult drama about serial murder, rape and sexualized violence. Not appropriate for kids, okay for mature teens.
