

NOW PLAYING

'THE LOST CITY'

March 25

Based solely on the trailer I am prepared to say that this might be the most charming movie ever, and I think we all need to see it immediately. Please let me not be wrong. Sandra Bullock plays a romance novelist with a hot cover model (Channing Tatum) and they end up kidnapped and in a jungle (in sequins!) somewhere and Daniel Radcliffe and Brad Pitt both show up. See what I mean?

'DOCTOR STRANGE IN THE MULTIVERSE OF MADNESS'

May 6

The summer movie season kicks off with this superhero saga, which you might know something about if you understood those post-credit sequences in "Spider-Man: No Way Home." Benedict Cumberbatch returns in the title role; Elizabeth Olsen, Rachel McAdams, Benedict Wong and Chiwetel Ejiofor co-star. And director Sam Raimi returns to the Marvel universe after a long absence (his last outing: "Spider-Man 3," otherwise known as The Third Tobey Maguire One, in 2007).

'NOPE'

July 22

Jordan Peele ("Get Out," "Us") likes to keep his movie plots under wraps, so all we know at this point is that "Nope" is another horror movie from Peele's creative mind, that it will star Daniel Kaluuya (Oscar-nominated for "Get Out"), Keke Palmer and Steven Yuen, that it will likely scare us to death and get us talking, and that Peele likes movie titles with very few letters in them.

'MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE 7'

Sept. 30

This is the third "M:I" installment from writer/director Christopher McQuarrie, and the first two — "Rogue Nation" and "Fallout" — were pretty thrilling indeed. Tom Cruise, as super spy Ethan Hunt, will once again perform death-defying feats; alongside him will be Rebecca Ferguson, Simon Pegg, Ving Rhames, Vanessa Kirby and (new to the series) Esai Morales and Cary Elwes.

'BLACK PANTHER: WAKANDA FOREVER'

Nov. 11

As difficult as it is to imagine this franchise without Chadwick Boseman (who died of cancer in 2020), the new film will reunite director Ryan Coogler with original cast members Lupita Nyong'o, Angela Bassett, Letitia Wright, Daniel Kaluuya and Martin Freeman.

'SHE SAID'

Nov. 18

Maria Schrader, an Emmy winner for the Netflix series "Unorthodox," directs this based-on-a-true story drama about two New York Times reporters, played by Carey Mulligan and Zoe Kazan, who uncovered evidence of Hollywood producer Harvey Weinstein's long history of sexual misconduct. I love this cast, which also includes Patricia Clarkson, Andre Braugher and Samantha Morton.
