While in a barbar shop at the county seat town he inquired about Bullards, stating he had several years ago pur hased four lots there for which h paid $400 and he thought he would go down to look them over. At first the barber thought he was joshing but when he realised that the man was serious he explained that the city was serious he explained that the city of Builards is comprised largely of Mr. Builard's store and post office. The new-comer was highly indignant when he learned the truth and in-stead of continuing his trip took the stead of continuing his trip took the next train out. It was not learned who sold the man the lots but it is supposed that some shark has been doing a real estate business among easterners at the expense of the Bul-lards community. Undoubtedly the man was given to understand that Bullards was a city of some impor-tance.-Western World.
