WHEN SUBSCRIPTIONS EXPIRE

The figures following the date of the month on your paper or label are for the year only. Thus "Jan. 21" means "January 1, 1931" and "April 23" means "April 1, 1932." The Sentinel has no expiration dates except on the first of some months. It never so much time in bookkeeping to have only 12 expiration dates in the entire year, instead of three hundred and sixty-five that we are glad to give you one, two, or three free papers, if need be, to have it that way. Your subscription for the Sentinel, if it does not expire February first, will expire March first or on the first day of some succeeding month.

Gets $73.50 for Scalps

F. A. Wells, of Coaledo, called yesterday morning with a sack of pelts for which the county clerk had just paid him $73.50. There were seven wildcats and one coyote, and he caught all but one of them in March by placing traps in their trails. He says that if a persistent war on them is kept up they will soon grow scarcer and larger bounties will have to be offered to get hunters and trappers to go after them. But there are plenty left yet and in summer it is not as easy to trap them as in winter.

Card of Thanks

We, the undersigned, wish to thank all those who so kindly offered their sympathy and assistance during our recent bereavement.

W. J. Floyd and family.

That Long Reply

If we had followed our editorial inclinations we should certainly have pruned quite drastically the article from the pen of our friend Easton elsewhere published, but inasmuch as he is answering a rather severe criticism of his former utterances in the Sentinel, we have given space to all he wishes to say. But as to anything further on either side in this controversy, although it relates to the question of state aid to men who were in the United States service during the world war on which we are to vote on June 7, we shall have to impose a space limit hereafter.

As Mr. Easton is the father of one of the men who was in the overseas service, and who will benefit by this act many fold more than the family will pay intaxes on account of this act if it is adopted, however wrong we may think he is in some of his statements, he certainly is not taking the position he does for financial profit.

Early Postal Service.

The history of the postal service and its employees extends to the days of the Romans when the earliest known means of transmitting a message was by courier. These admirable organizers, the Romans, marked by a "post" the place in the road where the relay of one runner by another was effected; thus they named the modern system long before it was born. The first letter post seems to have existed in the Hanse towns in the thirteenth century to facilitate relations between the merchants of the various members of the Hanseatic league.

Painters as Conversers.

Haxlitt tells us that the best converser he ever knew was the best painter. "I mean Northcote, the painter. Painters, by their profession, are not bound to shine in conversation, and they shine the more. He lends his ear to an observation as if you had brought him a piece of news, and enters into it with as much avidity and earnestness as if it interested him personally." Romilly was a similar talker; his conversation never indicated a wish to display, but flowed from the abundance of a refined and richly informed understanding.—William Mathews.

AUTUMN PARTY.

"We must give a party for the Autumn Paint club," said Jack Frost.

"We must indeed," said Master Chilly.

"Let us have one," said all of the Frost Brothers together.

"Ah, yes, let us have one," said Master Heavy Frost, and Master Very Cool said:

"By all means, let us have a party." "We will decorate all the windows and nip the flowers and dance over the lawns and bushes," said Jack Frost.

"For we want plenty of decorations for our party. And we will all give the party and come to the party and enjoy the party, for we are the Autumn Paint club members."

They agreed to have the party that very night.

"You take the lead, Jack Frost," they said, "and as soon as you tell us what we must do, we will off and do it."

"We will go wherever you say. And we will gladly do our work, for our work is our play."

"They call a day that is not far off," said Master Heavy Frost. "Thanksgiving day. It seems they're all thankful that day, or rather they stop that day and think of all they have to be thankful for."

"They think of all sorts of things, such as how nice it is they live in beautiful places, where they have such good times and where there are many things to do."

"And they're thankful they're warm and have lots to eat, and they're thankful that when it is summer time they often have ice cream."

"They're thankful, too, that they have people to love them—mothers and fathers, and so forth."

"And turkeys do not mind being eaten on Thanksgiving day, for they consider it quite an honor to be taken as the special food of such a fine and special occasion."

"But I say," Master Heavy Frost continued, "that we, too, celebrate our Thanksgiving day."

"We, too, should celebrate it, for we can. Listen to my plan."

"Let us hear it," said Master Very Cool.

"I'd like to hear it," said Master Chilly.

"And so would I," said the other Frost Brothers.

"Do tell it to us at once," said Jack Frost. "I am eager to hear."

"Well," said Master Heavy Frost. "It doesn't matter if we celebrate Thanksgiving day a little before or a little after the day, as long as we celebrate it."

"We should celebrate it, for we have a great deal to be thankful for."

"In the first place, we come around every autumn and have a great many fine parties. This is just one of many, many fine parties."

"And we enjoy life so much!" "We paint beautiful pictures, and enjoy it so. We nip the flowers and dance over the lawns and bushes and enjoy doing that."

"Ah, we have beautiful times, and we should be thankful for them."

"And then I believe the squirrels and the chipmunks would come to our Thanksgiving party, and the boys and girls agree that we do a good work, for we see that the nuts are right for them to gather in the autumn."

"Yes, Chippy Chippy and Nippy Nippy and Nutty Chum will all enjoy the nuts, and that will be their Thanksgiving party."

"Let's call our Autumn party a Thanksgiving party and let us all be thankful that we come in the autumn on the still, cool nights."

"And, too, that we are allowed to play and work with our magic paint brushes and that no one stops us, but that we, too, can have a little season of the year all of our own."

"What does everyone else say who is a member of the Autumn Paint club?" "We all agree that it's a fine, a marvelous, a wonderful idea," they shouted.

"Then for our party, our party of joy and work and play, where we tell how thankful we are for our time of the year, for the time of dear old Jack Frost and his brothers and his workers!"

It only costs 15 cents more to get the Oregon Farmer when subscribing for the Sentinel, and everyone agrees it is the biggest 15 cents' worth of reading they ever saw. The Farmer is issued weekly.
