Tuesday's Council Meeting

The city council attended to a few street matters at an adjourned session Tuesday evening at which all members were present.

No objection having been filed to the improvement of Knowlton avenue, the grade on that street was adopted by ordinance and a call made for bids for performing the work. Thirty days were allowed for the completion of the job after the awarding of the contract.

It was ordered that $2,688.25 be paid Peart Bros., on the planking of the North End improvement, and $362.52 be paid O. C. Harry for the Ninth street work, each item being for 75 per cent of the work already completed.

The improvement on Holly and Rush streets has been completed and M. W. Payne, the contractor, was paid $143.54, which is within $200 of the amount of his contract.

Game with North Bend

The Coquille High School football team journeyed over to Marshfield last Saturday to meet a team which averaged 30 to 40 pounds per man heavier and were swamped by a score of 97 to 0. There are no apologies to make for the showing. The locals met a team, the members of which were so much larger that they could run wild and score at will, which they did. Nearly every member of the Coquille team received minor injuries, which lamed them, but Robert Trigg and Donald Pierce were laid out with sprains and had to retire from the game.

Tomorrow the North Bend High School team will meet the local eleven at Kistner's Field here, the game being called at 2:30. North Bend won a very good game from Myrtle Point up there last Saturday, 7 to 0, and showed considerable football ability. Admission to the game tomorrow is 35 cents.

Who Is At Fault?

Wonder if the Coos Bay Times was not mistaken Wednesday when it announced that Ned Patterson, of that city, who has just been named to take an examination for appointment to West Point, was a graduate of the Marshfield high school last year. Patterson was one of the men who played such havoc with the Coquille boys on the football team last Saturday, and no one who holds a high school diploma is eligible to play on a high school team.

National Hotel Burned

A friend in Washington sends us a copy of the Evening Star of that city containing an account of the fire which destroyed the National hotel there, one of the historic buildings of that city, which has during the past hundred years probably sheltered more public men from all parts of the country than any other hostelry in the city. In the Washington letter we wrote a few weeks ago we mentioned stopping at this hotel 28 years ago.

THE SENTINEL FOLKS ARE HOME AGAIN

these hills on our first trip to the Pacific northwest fourteen years ago.

But it was not to tell of the engineering wonders of this great artery of travel between the east and west we started to write—rather to record the how the journey impressed our feelings. Monday morning we were at Pocatello still several thousand feet above sea level and when nightfall came we were still in the Gem state, dodging across the Snake river at Nyassa and back again at Payette, without finding Oregon sensibly different from Idaho.

We saw lots of irrigated ranches along the mountain valleys, but the prevailing tints of mountain and plain were still yellow and brown, varied more or less by the black lava rock, sometimes in great masses and again strewn over the soil in chunks a foot or more in diameter rendering it entirely incapable of cultivation. The dull gray sage brush was much in evidence and dust covered everything, as is usually the case in irrigated sections.

Nearing the west line of the state we found more greenery, the water having been let on to the alfalfa fields, but the air was still full of harsh alkaline dust and the day dry and hot; but we had to beg the porter for a little more of it, the car was so close. The result was dust in the car as well as outside when the windows were opened. He declined to open the ventilators at the top of the car also, saying that it would mean a 10 days lay-off for him if he did.

At the same time we fell in with a resident of Boise, the state capital, who when he learned we were from Oregon told us what a rainy region he had found this coast, adding that he wouldn't live here if the whole country was given to him. Our native politeness forbade us telling him what we thought of his hot and dust-enveloped state. Instead we remarked that the section through which we were passing seemed to be the garden spot of Idaho, which was true as far as it went but lacked volumes of covering the situation.

Tuesday morning at daybreak we were in Oregon again rolling down the Columbia, a stream which now hears lots of sound "save its own dashing," the phrase in which Bryant immortalized its lonesomeness. We were thankful and happy then to breathe again the moist, soft air of Oregon, to see again the land of the pointed firs and to bid farewell to the dusty breezes that had so long enveloped us.

At Portland we revelled in the all enveloping fog and rejoiced in the prospect of the balmy rains which they forecast. And the journey home from the Rose City by the night train was a delight. The Pullmans were bright and clean, free from the all-enveloping dust that had made the two previous days of the trip so uncomfortable; and Nature was lavish instead of niggardly in her emerald ints on this evergreen shore. We were happy to be home again, and still happier that our home was in this wonderful valley of western Oregon.

7955 Bonus Claims

A total of 7955 ex-service men, who enlisted in the world war from Oregon, have filed applications for benefits under the so-called bonus law, according to a report prepared by Captain Harry Brumbaugh, secretary of the world war veterans' state aid commission.

Of the total number of applications filed with the commission, 4224 seek cash bonus, while 3731 request loans. The commission spent Wednesday considering applications for positions of appraisers in the different counties of the state. There will be three appraisers in each county who will receive $5 for each appraisal in connection with the loan feature of the law. This fee is to be paid by the applicants, under the provisions of the act.

Members of the world war veterans' state aid commission announced that the suit to test the constitutionality of the so-called bonus law enacted at the last legislature and approved by the voters at a subsequent election, probably will be filed in the circuit court of Multnomah county next Friday.

The action will be of a friendly nature and T. H. Boyd, at the head of the Portland post, American Legion, will be named as plaintiff in the suit.

Members of the supreme court have said that they will give the bonus suit right of way over other actions in case an appeal is taken to the high court. Members of the world war veterans' state aid commission do not anticipate any material delay in paying the claims of ex-service men as a result of the suit.

The Sentinel and the Oregon Farmer can still be obtained for $2.15 for one year.
