Oregon History That Interests

The library of the University of Oregon receives 95 daily and weekly newspapers of the state. These are kept on file in a special room, which is daily crowded with students seeking "home town" news. No works of fictions, no magazines, can compare in popularity with what the Oregon editors and reporters write, says a University letter just received. At the end of each year the papers are bound and kept permanently on file in the library. In many instances scholars engaged in research have found these big gray volumes of great value.

Goldwyn Week at the Liberty October 23 and 29. A specially selected list of features will be found on page three. Don't miss a change as Sam says "the best is yet to come."

Don't forget what a big newspaper bargain the Oregon Farmer in when remitting for the Sentinel.

Sacrifices Her Life for Cubs

Fred Gardner had a rather exciting adventure on a recent trip up Rogue river, says the Gold Beach Reporter. While traveling through the woods in company with his dogs he suddenly came upon a varmint which he took to be a wildcat and wishing to give his hounds some training he set them upon the beast. About that time the dogs discovered another varmint and Fred found his supposed wildcats were a couple of panther cubs. When attacked, the cubs set up a wall that was heard by the mother and she came tearing down the hillside to the rescue. Fred was afraid his dogs would be disabled by the old female so he took a shot at her, but the bullet only wounded the beast which sprang toward Fred, coming so close that he aimed the gun into her mouth and pulled the trigger. The bullet tore away the panther's lower jaw, and caused the varmint to seek refuge in a tree, a well directed shot suddenly ending its career.

MYRTLE POINT ITEMS.

EAST FORK NOTES

Last week Grover Haynes had to go to Coquille for a load of gas. He got stuck once on account of the wet.

James Benham, who has been working on the road with his team at Lee, came home last week. Julius Benham and Mrs. Julius, who have been on the road job at Lee nearly all summer, are home again.

The rains of the past two days are causing the grass to make a showing and the sunshine-between rains is of the warm spring kind.

Alex Anderson, the engineer at the rock crusher, was in Company C, 319 Engineers, California troops, 8 Division. They were in France. The day I went to town with him, I asked him about the work they did; it was laying out trenches and building roads and bridges. For nine days they were under fire when they were laying pontoon bridges across the Meuse river. Our artillery put up a barrage to protect them and the Huns replied. The guns were back beyond their sight but the hiss and whine of the shells seemed to be almost continuous with an occasional tull—but they laid the bridges. I asked if they got in to the fight at any time. "No they took our guns away from us."

Asked about the Y. M. C. A., outside of the entertainments and the writing and reading rooms, he has poor opinion of it, as he put it, "there was no accommodation about them." He had no experience with the K. of C., but for the Red Cross and the Salvation Army, he has nothing but words of praise, for they were on their job morning, noon and night and between times.

Dr. E. B. Ross, of the Bureau of Standards, has it figured out that war costs 93 per cent.

Has 32 Children

Race suicide doesn't seem to be very popular in Georgia where one father has cut 32 notches on his stick. In the bunch there were seven pairs of twins and two sets of triplets. That almost double discounts the record of the Sentinel editor's great grandfather, who bought the old family land, now belonging to a brother we have just visited, two years before the Declaration of Independence was written. That ancestor had children, two pairs of twins and a set of triplets.
