Suicide at Powers

A Powers press dispatch says that Mrs. J. B. Hill was killed at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening when struck by a logging train at the edge of the city. Some who were witnesses said Mrs. Hill stepped in front of the train and put her hands over her eyes. The engine blew the whistle several times but she did not heed.

An attempt was made to stop the train, but it was coming down grade and could not be stopped in time. The locomotive and two cars passed over the woman's body. Her head was crushed and a foot cut off.

Coroner Wilson was called to look into the case.

Mrs. Hill was about 36 years old. She was related by marriage to the family of M. E. Price at Powers. Her husband is said to be an engineer who is now in Nevada. She has been living at Powers for several months.

For Armistice Day

For Armistice Day the Marshfield American Legion post at Marshfield has arranged a tentative program.

The stores in both cities will close at eleven in the morning and Robert Dillard said there would probably be some particular surprise sprung at that hour.

In the afternoon there will be a football game between All-Stars of the Coquille valley, and those of Coos Bay. At six in the evening the ladies of Coos Bay will serve a dinner for all ex-service men, the charge to be placed at a nominal figure. Afterwards, the jitney dance will occur in the Firemen's hall, in Marshfield.

The New North Bend Hotel

In our last issue we printed a picture of the Hotel North Bend, says the Coos Bay Harbor. The contractors have completed the fifth story and are now putting on the roof. We wanted to emphatically state that all rooms were outside rooms, as that is quite a drawing card for any hotel and one seldom finds a hotel so equipped. In our effort to make it clear we stated exactly the opposite. One of our friends said, "why, of course, the rooms are on the inside and no one will have to undress out in the rain."

No Sweetbrier, Please

Appropos of what the Woman's Club of Coquille has suggested in beautifying the highway—planting sweet brier on the banks of the cuts—J. D. Laird, of Sitkum, asks the Sentinel to say that if the ladies will take a trip out to Brewster and see how the brier is taking the country out there, he is sure they will use some other vine for the purpose mentioned. Over in Douglas county, between Sitkum and Rebasburg, he says the brier and the Tipton weed are the greatest nuisances they have to contend with.

M. E. Church South

At 11 a. m. the pastor will discuss the subject of "Peace—the False and the True." At 7:30 p. m. the sermon topic will be "Is Feeling a Safe Guide?" Special music at both services.

Hoover Case Falls

The case against Jack Hoover, indicted by the grand jury for non-support, was dismissed on demurrer Tuesday because two charges were contained in the one indictment—failure to support his wife and failure to support his child. In dismissing the demurrer Judge Coke re-referred the case to the grand jury.
