Johnson's Mill

Just a few lines to tell of the happenings since I last wrote.

The water is going down as fast as I ever saw it.

Little Ethel Collier, who has had a complication of diphtheria and scarlet fever, was getting along nicely till last Sunday, when her fever came up again. She has been confined to her bed again but is better now and we sincerely hope she will soon be entirely well again.

Last Wednesday was the windiest day I think I ever saw in Oregon. I began to think I was back on the Texas plains again, but when I would look out and see all the ground covered with water I said, "No, I am still in Oregon."

Rev. H. S. Garrett and family, of Myrtle Point, and Rev. Mr. Nolen, the evangelist, who is holding a revival at that place, came down and spent the day with the Finley family. The Finleys enjoyed the day to the fullest extent and I guess the preachers did. I am sure they enjoyed the chicken anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Davis' home was wonderfully blessed by the arrival of a sweet little girl baby on Tuesday.

The quarantine was lifted from the Knife home Sunday, after being on thirty odd days, and Jackson entered school again Monday.

Mrs. Ellis and daughter, Ena, went to Bandon Monday to have some dental work done.

Mr. George Ellis has purchased the Frog hollow ranch from his brother, Cal, and moved into the new bungalow his brother built. We are glad to have them in our midst.

Miss Minnie Finley and Mr. John Stone were married last Sunday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Finley. Rev. H. S. Garrett, of Myrtle Point, tied the nuptial knot that made them husband and wife. We wish them much joy and happiness and hope their path will be a path of thornless roses.

Miss Bessie Finley came over from East Fork last Saturday to be at her sister's wedding, returning to her school Monday morning.

HOW WALL STREET GOT NAME

Designation Arose From Pallade Erected by Sturdy Old Peter Stuyvesant in Early Days.

If there had not been war between Holland and England there is no telling what would have been the name of Wall street, New York. The financial center of America might have borne any other name and have been just as powerful as it is.

The wall that gave to it its name was put up by Peter Stuyvesant. The old peg-legged autoocrat had his own intelligence service and he became convinced that the New England and Connecticut colonies were going to attack him. His town north of the fort was unprotected and he threw a wooden wall from the East to the North rivers. It was built of logs that were used as pilasters, with the upper ends spiked.

It was not a wonderful defense, as we look at things now, but against an assault by men armed with blunderbusses it would have taken some sacrifice on the part of the attackers to have carried it.

But the old wooden wall stood for a half-century and cramped the growth of the town. There was a ditch alongside it, and at night the gate was closed and bolted and guarded. When you got outside the wall you were in the suburbs of New Amsterdam with no commutation service to kick about. It, however, named the street that ran beside it and which is, perhaps, the best known thoroughfare in the United States.

Origin of "When in Rome."

The saying, "When in Rome," used most often as an admonition to people who seem unable to accommodate themselves to the ways and manners of those they associate with, is one of the most ancient anecdotes known to literature. It refers to a witty conversation between St. Augustine and St. Ambrose. St. Augustine was somewhat puzzled about the regulations concerning abstinence from high feasting, because in some parts of Italy Saturday was observed as a fast day and in others Sunday was set aside for abnegation. He consulted St. Ambrose, calling his attention to the fact that in Rome Saturday was a fast day, while in Milan no such restriction prevailed. St. Ambrose answered: "When I am in Milan I do not fast on Saturday. When in Rome I do fast on Saturday."

Masters' Twenty-Nine Languages.

Sir Richard Burton, explorer and linguist, was the master of 29 languages which he understood perfectly. He made it a rule to study or read something in one of these languages every day and managed to keep them separated in his mind. He had seven work tables and switched from one to the other every day. At night he banished all work and devoted himself to a novel. When he became sick he would go to bed with a bunch of novels and stay there on a starvation diet until he felt ready to get up and go to work.

SPLIT ON CHURCH DOCTRINE

Puritans First Came Into Being as Separators From the National Church of England.

The Puritans were a party which, though nominally taking its rise at the time when Archbishop Parker, at the request of Queen Elizabeth, formulated the constitution, articles and the ritual of the national Church of England, really owes its origin to the influence of Wycliffe and the Lollards. In consequence of Parker's scheme of church purity, serious differences manifested themselves among the clergy, those who demanded greater strictness of life and doctrine being called in derision Puritan, or in Burns' phrase "the unco guld." The party became split up into an extreme section that preferred the Presbyterian system to the Episcopal system, and a moderate section whose desire was simply to draw a strongly marked line of doctrinal demarcation between the two standards of the two churches. Later on (1680), there was a third party, which eventually became the most powerful of all, viz.: the Separatists or Independents, who advocated the congregational system, whereby each charge would be responsible to itself alone. In the reign of James I (1620), the Pilgrim Fathers sailed from Delfthaven (in the Netherlands), touching at Southampton, England, and founded the colony of Plymouth, Mass., at the end of that year. A few years later in the reign of Charles I, a great wave of Puritan migration built up the colony of Massachusetts bay, an offshoot of which was the colony of Connecticut.

Possibility of Saving Coal.

An ordinary passenger locomotive consumes a pound-of fuel for every 52 feet it travels. Each unnecessary stop, made with a heavy freight or passenger train, represents a fuel loss of from 500 to 750 pounds of coal, depending on the weight of the train, the length of the stop and the grade conditions. A brake-line air-leak on a train of 50 freight cars has been known to cause a loss of as much as 2,540 pounds of coal in a ten-hour period. The loss of coal each time a modern locomotive pops off for five minutes is about 75 pounds. If locomotive firemen were to save a little more than one shovelful of coal out of each ton used, the total saving would be equal to nearly one per cent of all the coal handled.—Floyd W. Parsons, in World's Work.

He Cured Her.

The absent-minded husband was prone to forget the mailing of important letters given him by his wife when he started off for the office in the morning. So she had resorted to the old trick of placing a postcard addressed to herself among the envelopes. When she didn't receive the card in the late afternoon mail she could reproach him at night. It was very embarrassing. So the absent-minded husband decided that he would have to stop it. One day he wrote a message on the back of the tale-telling postcard. It read: "No, dearest, I didn't forget to mail the letters." After that his wife abandoned the scheme.—Milwaukee Journal.

Safe at Last.

Uncle (telling tall yarn to young nephew)—"We had more than a mile to go to get out of the forest, when we heard the howls of a pack of wolves behind us. I strained every nerve, but all in vain. Now I could hear their panting breath, and at last I felt their muzzles touching me, when—" Nephew—"You must have felt glad, uncle." Uncle (amazed)—"Glad! Why?" Nephew—"When you found they had their muzzles on."

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the system. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, etc. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
