Ernest Anderson Shot

There have been some very inaccurate reports in circulation here about the shooting of a rancher at Haynes Inlet Wednesday, which seems to have been entirely unnecessary. The following in relation to that affair we quote from yesterday's Times:

Ernest Anderson, aged 27 years, rancher of Haynes Inlet, is at Mercy hospital in a serious condition as a result of being shot Wednesday afternoon by Constable P. W. Goodman who, with two federal officers, was making a search for a still.

The shooting took place near the residence of Pere Peterson, who lives not far away from the Anderson place and near the Peterson Landing.

The constable states that he had told Anderson he was under arrest and that Anderson ran. The officer says he fired several times over Anderson's head before the bullet he fired at him took effect.

Anderson at the hospital Thursday morning told his story in which he claims the facts to be entirely different. He says he did not see Goodman and that he turned to talk to Peterson behind him when he was shot and did not know anything more until he regained consciousness. He claims he did not run.

The shooting took place near a small house in which were found two stills in operation, together with mash and liquor. Anderson and Pere Peterson approached the place when Constable Goodman and one of the federal officers were there.

The wounded man was brought by Dr. Phil J. Keizer to Mercy hospital at North Bend and attended by him and Dr. Russell Keizer. The latter stated that Anderson's condition was, of course, serious but that he regarded his chances were one of dying to nine of living.

Anderson was shot in the back. The bullet missed an artery and is lodged in front of the spinal column. On account of the necessity of having to go through a number of vital organs it was regarded as too dangerous to attempt to remove the bullet.

Dr. Keizer said it was in a place where it could remain throughout the man's life without danger, provided that no complications set in.
