

Protest of Fifty-Eight--58 Non-Catholic Physicians

Portland, Oregon, October 4, 1922.

We, the undersigned MEMBERS OF THE MEDICAL PROFESSION of Portland, hereby voice an emphatic protest against the campaign of vilification conducted by a certain woman lecturer and her associates—directed against the Sisters of Providence and St. Vincent's Hospital, Portland.

Our daily contact for years with the Sisters and their Hospital has thoroughly familiarized us with their lofty standard of personal morals, their unimpeachable character and efficiency. Not being of the Catholic faith, we have no ends to serve except the highest standards of our profession; as medical men, we value our own reputation and integrity too highly to be actively associated with any organization of institution upon which serious reflections could be cast. Therefore we regard this vilification of the Sisters and their institution as a reflection upon ourselves.

We denounce as the crudest and most malicious form of falsehood statements like these: That the Sisters are cruelly treated by their superiors; that they are enslaved; that they are deprived of physical liberty; that there are moral irregularities of any kind connected with their Sisterhood or their private lives.

The untiring labors and countless benefactions of the Sisters of Providence and their Hospital (St. Vincent's) during their long term of devoted service in Portland—merit for them the deepest gratitude from our citizens. These should deprecate and denounce the libelous falsehoods and slanderous insinuations, which the above referred to "ex-nun lecturer" (Lucretia or Elizabeth Schoffen) has been disseminating.

Why Not Wear White?

The following article on the best way to end the hunting season's homicide is contributed to the Oregon Journal by Lans Leneve of this city:

A toll of death has again resulted among hunters this deer season. Every year brings the same result—death. In spite of all the warnings issued, in spite of past accidents, never a season goes by that some hunter is not shot by a brother sportsman for a deer. There is no excuse for this. Nothing but buck deer are supposed to be shot, and therefore a hunter should see his deer, and see the horns, before shooting. He is violating the law when he fails to do this. There is one thing wrong with the whole business: the penalty for shooting another hunter for a deer is not severe enough. It should be the same penalty as shooting down a man on a city street, for there is no more excuse for doing so while in the woods. If every hunter knew he would be hanged or would receive a life sentence for shooting a fellow-hunter for a deer he would not be so anxious to blaze away at a bit of moving brush or a patch of red shining through the brush. Speaking of red, I really believe it is the worst color a hunter can wear. Every tenderfoot at the opening of the season is told that a deer is red. He does not know if it is a bright red, or what shade it is, and the chances are 10 to 1 that he will get excited at the red object he sees, and very likely shoot a man instead of a deer. Why not wear white? There is no animal in the woods that is white. True, a deer will see you quicker, and may become more easily frightened at white; but supposing it does; the hunter will be able to hunt with a little feeling of security. The situation gets worse each year, and it is no wonder that old hunters are selling their guns rather than take chances with men who value the killing of a deer more than a human life.

They Average $616.58

The average poultry farm co-operating with the Extension Service in the year 1921 in carrying on a systematic educational poultry program made a labor income of $616.58, according to records kept on 21 such poultry demonstration farms in Western Oregon. This average labor income represents the difference between receipts and expenses, less a fixed charge for interest and depreciation on buildings and equipment.

The average cost of feed per hen per year was $2.46, and the annual profit per hen was $1.71. These 21 poultrymen devoted an average of three and a quarter labor hours per day to their flocks. Only two of the 21 farms showed a loss. Three farms showed a profit of $2.00 or more per hen and the greatest gains were respectively $7.80 and $6.73 per hen per year. Receipts per hen range from $3.60 per hen per year to $12.92 per hen per year, with an average of $4.87.

These 21 farms are well scattered over the Western Oregon territory.

This year 39 farms are co-operating with the Extension Service on this basis—one of these farms being that of O. H. Waymire, of the Kentuck Inlet community in Coos county. In the month of August the Waymire flock headed the list in average production per hen.

Dry Law Here to Stay

The dry act is on the statute books to stay and America will never depart from it, President Harding told a delegation of the Allied Christian Agencies at Washington Wednesday.

Some features of the law are difficult of enforcement, he explained, and are causing the government some concern, but the spirit of prohibition will be carried out and there will never be a return to the open saloon or manufacture of liquor, he declared.

When asked that the United States do its "full duty to the rest of the world," the president reiterated the policy stated recently. He pointed out that the United States is anxious and willing to help, but cannot be drawn into the politics of the old world.

Every Woman Loves to Paint when she knows how—let us tell you

PAINTING is really fascinating work. Once you are started you'll probably not want to stop until you have refinished many things you did not intend to do at first.

Of course there are some simple directions that must be followed if the work is to be successful, for we have a special "Home Service Paint Department" which was organized just to tell you how to paint.

Perhaps some of your furniture, floors, woodwork or walls are beginning to look a little old—just on the surface. Pick out one or two things to refinish. Tell us about them and how you want them to look when finished.

Our experts will tell you what materials to use, how to do the work step by step, what brushes you'll need, and everything about it.

For 72 years we have been making paints, varnishes, enamels, wall finishes and stains for women to use. They are the finest materials of their kind that we know.
