Beneficial Effect of Sanding Is Noted in Wisconsin.

Frost Hazarde Greatly Reduced and Water Supply Conserved by Elim-Insting Need for Frequent

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Observations by the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture on the beneficial effect of sanding crupberry bogs have recently been confirmed in a report from the cranberry experiment station near Cranmoor, Wis. According to the report there is an average of 58 days between the last spring and first fall frost (June 25 to August 22) over unsanded bog, as against 118 days between the last spring and first fall frost over sanded bog.

This represents a gain of 95 per

LIME OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

Provision for an adequate supply of lime in the ration abould be made by poultry raisers, for if this important mineral element is lacking in the food a drain is made on the reserve supply in the bones and soft tissues of the animals which interferes unterially with egg production in mature hens and in the proper development of the growing chicks.
