EAST FORK NOTES

The Leathermans have dressed a long stick of timber into a mast to carry the wires for the radio which they intend to place in their homes.

With line and blocks borrowed from the Leathermans and the help of K. E. Marcy and his big team, Everett Howe, Francis Mills and Dan Hoy moved the Rufus Howe cabin from the river bank to near the road. The Hoy family recently from Sumas, Wash., have moved into it.

Mr. Jenkins went down Friday with a few head of cattle. He said this would be the third time he had been to town since coming out to the ranch, that is something like two or three years; soda pop and the movies have no attraction for him.

Jessie Laird went down Friday driving a few cows. A man was along on horse back, who I took to be the helper or may be he was the boss, but Jessie was doing the driving. Sunday a bunch of cattle came in which looked as though they came from over the mountains.

Judging by the sounds of the blasts there must be lots of rock being gotten out at the rock quarry at Parther Creek.

The Germans have run their marks into the trillions so far that the non-value of the mark is like the ten thousand light years distance to the stars, incomprehensible. The non-value of the mark equals the non-character of the Germans or the non-character of the Germans equals the non-value of the mark. It is all the same in German, whether the cart is before the horse or the horse before the cart. —R. A. Easton.

Wouldn't Open Safe

Pete Vegetatos, proprietor of Jack's place on North Front street, Marshfield, while facing a revolver, refused to open his safe to two hold-up men last Tuesday night at about 8:20 and got away with it. All they got was about $1.75 which he had on his person. The men were unmasked and Vegetatos believes he could identify them without trouble.—Times.
