Forty Year Old Skeleton

The skeleton of a man dead for at 20 years was discovered Sunday by Joe Hutcheson, Walter Lerwill and Howard Haskell, all of Tiller, who were engaged in cutting a trail in the mountains west of Tiller, says a Monday's press dispatch from Roseburg.

From all indications the man had died of exposure or sudden illness as the body lay on a hillside near a spring, with a gun lying before it, as it would probably have been placed by a person exhausted. Boots of expensive make, with the initials M. D. W., in the heels with hob nails, were found.

The rifle was a .38-calibre Marlin, 73 model, and a special brass clasp by which the gun was carired may lead to identification of the man. Wood of the stock had rotted away. An inquiry in the Tiller vicinity failed to locate anyone who remembered any hunter going into the mountainis who failed to return, but articles found on the body, now in the possession of Hutcheson, may lead to identification.

Run Over and Killed

Paddy O'Toole, aged 72, died at Mercy hospital Monday evening, from the shock of injuries sustained Saturday when he was run oved by a logging train at the Dement Creek Camp of the Coos Bay Lumber company.

Mr. O'Toole was engaged as a laborer and was handling a wheelbarrow. The logging engine was pushing some empty cars down the track and the trainmen thought that O'Toole saw the train coming. It was moving slowly. Instead of stopping before getting on the track, the old man kept going and the car struck him, knocking him down.

One arm was run over and badly crushed. It had to be amputated on his arrival at the hospital. The shock and his age proved too much.—Coos Bay Times.

2,000,000 Feet to Log

The Western White Cedar company has purchased Ponting & Hoskins logging rights in the Middle Elk district and a contract to log the tract, comprising approximately 2,000,000 feet of fir and cedar has been given Chas. Reichert. Besides getting out cedar logs Mr. Reichert plans to install a small mill and saw a certain amount of lumber. The output of his camp will be delivered at the wharf.—Port Orford Tribune.

EAST FORK NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Rose and Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson were out and spent Sunday by the river on the Rose place.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner, of Myrtle Point, spent the day in the canyon. Mrs. Turner is recently out of the hospital at Medford. It does seem good to her to be able to be outdoors, even if she is not able to do much walking. Those spikes of beauty, the foxgloves, interested them.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sherwood and Mr. and Mrs. George Lorenz came out to the camp Sunday for a day or two. It did us good to see Mr. Sherwood looking so well, and able to drive the car. If his strength had failed him, George was there to take the wheel. It struck me that one of the recuperative forces of life is the unwillingness to quit. Mr. Sherwood has that force and as far as he is concerned the old man with the scythe might as well hang it up in a tree for Sherwood is still at the wheel. Seeing them, made the day's work easier. When they all get out for their weeks of camping, then the joy of companionship as expressed in the lines, "Blest be the tie that binds."

It is reported that Al Bezosky caught a fawn and is going to raise it for a pet.

Mr. Henson, of Coquille, was up the East Fork last week looking for prospective buyers for the Dodge car.

O. P. Ferguson, a logger from Big Creek above Peter Ax's place, made a trip to Camas creek last week.

R. A. Easton.

Myrtle Inn Building

The Myrtle Inn Building is nearing completion. E. J. Michaels, the proprietor, is to be complimented on his progressiveness in erecting the building. On the ground floor are three large store rooms. One is already occupied by the Bon Ton Cafe, one will be for a heating and plumbing shop, and the other has not as yet been rented out although there is talk of another new store going in. The second floor is fitted up for apartments on one side, there being three in all, and on the other side single rooms. There are 26 rooms in all, besides four toilets, two baths, and one shower. Every room of the house is so arranged that the sun will shine in at the same time during the day.—Myrtle Point American.

Lumber Market to Rise

Jack Kronenberg, of Bandon, returned from a trip to San Francisco, where he was looking after business. He states that various lumbermen with whom he conferred there believed that the lumber market had about reached the bottom. It is already looking brighter and by fall they anticipate a decided rejuvenation.—Times.
