

Why it's easy to keep Barreled Sunlight clean

Barreled Sunlight is a white paint which produces a surface so smooth that dust or dirt—smudges or fingerprints—cannot "stick in." It can be kept clean as easily as white tile. A damp cloth will always wash it spotless.

Ideal for bathrooms and kitchen walls and for woodwork everywhere. Costs less than enamel, requires fewer coats and is guaranteed to remain white longer.

Barreled Sunlight is easy to apply. It flows freely without a brushmark. Is readily tinted. Sold in cans from half-pint to five gallon size.

County Agent Work

"With no reflection on the quality of the dairy industry in Tillamook county, which is mighty hard to beat, I hope to see the time when Coos county ranchers can say that we are second to none in the state," said William L. Teutsch, field representative of the extension service of the Oregon Agricultural college, who Wednesday discussed with the county court their attitude toward the establishment of county agent work in Coos county.

"Coos county is in my territory, Tillamook is not, and it is my ambition to some day tell the world that Coos county is the banner dairy county of Oregon," Teutsch said.

With excellent climatic and soil conditions and with a considerable area of tillable land, this county is generally considered, by those familiar with Oregon agriculture, to be the best coast agricultural county, he indicated.

The average production of 2600 cows in the Tillamook cow testing association is 331 pounds of butterfat annually, while the average production for this county is 195 pounds of fat. If the general production of Coos county cows could be increased to equal that of the Tillamook county cows, it would mean that dairymen of this county would increase their earning power by some $550,000 annually, Teutsch believes. Along with this would go the increase in land values because of the greater earning power, as well as an increase in the value of the livestock.

County agent work has been largely responsible for what has been done in Tillamook county and it is toward this same end that a county agent's efforts would be directed in Coos county, Teutsch concluded.

Makes Hospital Statement

The following statement is made by Rev. T. H. Temple regarding the proposed Wesley hospital at the Bay: "Arrangements are being completed as rapidly as possible for work on the new Wesley hospital, and in a short time the actual construction will start. Many have been prompt in the payment of their first installment for which we are very grateful. It will help very materially if those who have not paid will do so at once. F. E. Finley, the executive secretary, will appreciate your prompt action. Personally I wish to express my appreciation to all who have contributed so generously to the hospital project."

Lodge Warns Against Bryan

Senator Lodge in an address dictated from his sick bed at Nahant, Massachusetts, warns the republicans against what he terms the "volatility" of Governor Charles W. Bryan becoming president, as he said is very likely to happen if Coolidge fails to receive a majority of the electoral vote and the election is thrown into congress.

Lodge declared a deadlock probable in the house and if the election came to the senate "it is quite probable" the two former-labor senators and others listed as republicans would vote with the democrats and elect Bryan.

Two Arrests for Drunkenness

Two arrests for drunkenness during the week and spoiled Menfield's record for sobriety after no arrests had been made for two full weeks, says the Daily News. James Hogan forfeited $15 bail when he failed to appear for a hearing Monday morning, following his arrest the day before. Lloyd E. Johnson forfeited a total of $50, representing bail for two charges, drunkenness and possession of liquor.

Harold Hodge Dies at Eugene

Harold Keith Hodge was born at Ash Grove, Missouri, October 29, 1888. His death occurred August 2, 1924, at Eugene, Oregon.

When he was two years old the family left the east, coming to Southern California, where they resided for a year. They moved to Oregon, settling first at Norway. Within a short time they bought a farm on Fishtrap. Soon after, when Harold was six years old, the mother died. Thus early in life he was deprived of that influence and association which most men hold the most precious of all their early experience.

His entire life, with the exception of short periods spent at school and in the army, was lived in this vicinity.

He graduated from the Coquille High School and attended college for a time at Albany, Oregon.

He was a veteran of the world war, serving as a corporal in the Signal Corps from June, 1918 to Feb. 1919 at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, and Camp Meade, Maryland.

In the year 1915 he became a member of the Coquille lodge of I. O. O. F. He was married May 17, 1919, to Adelia Robison. To this union was born one child, a boy now one year old, Renaldo Marshall.

When discharged from the army he was apparently in good health, but in a short time ill health forced him to give up all work. In the attempt to regain his former strength he and Mrs. Hodge spent a year in California but there was little improvement. Returning to Oregon, they spent a short time in Coos county and then moved to Eugene, Oregon, Feb., 1924. Here they bought a home and were living there when death overtook him.

In addition to his widow and infant son he is survived by two brothers, Walter S. Hodge, of the State Highway Department, living at Redmond, Oregon, and Arthur R. Hodge, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Union, Oregon.

He was well and favorably known by a large circle of friends in the county who join with the bereaved family in mourning his early and untimely death.

The funeral services were held at the Ellingson Chapel in Coquille, Rev. Thos. Barklow officiated. After the services at the chapel the body was taken to the I. O. O. F. cemetery where the Odd Fellows held a ceremony and laid the body to rest.

Time to Scream

When the East Side young woman whose home had been invaded by a burglar screamed until she aroused the neighborhood, she put into practice the very best means of ridding the house of the unpunished criminal, says the Portland Telegram.

Screaming is a mighty sight safer than a "gun," and quite as effective. Except when you are "scared to death," your voice is always instantly available; your revolver usually isn't. A burglar doesn't shoot a woman or man who persists in screaming. A pistol shot would increase the chances of his capture.

A single scream may not awaken neighbors, but if the screaming is repeated at top voice, it will be heard outside. If from no other motive than curiosity, neighbors will get up and rush out, some of them arming themselves.

When you hear a burglar in the house, scream and keep on screaming. Men or women, if you can reach an open window and split the night air with cries for help, the burglar will depart at full speed. You may safely depend on that.

The trouble is one can't always scream when he needs to. We remember one morning twenty-five or thirty years ago when about half way from our home to the Southern Kansas depot at Independence, Kansas, a man stepped up to us midway in the three-quarters of a mile walk to the Santa Fe depot, where we were to take an early morning train a little after four in the morning, and placed his hand on our arm and began to talk to us. In the few seconds before we realized that he was just drunk, we tried to speak but found that we were tongue-tied and absolutely couldn't utter a coherent word. We had no occasion to converse with him, however, and he didn't really attempt to detain us so that we had our spasms of fright for nothing.

The Mystery Explained

The mystery caused by the sighting of a number of distress rockets sent up by a vessel off Eureka Monday night was cleared when the marine department of the chamber of commerce received a message saying that the ship was the steamer Saginaw, bound from Coos Bay to San Francisco, and that she had lost her propeller. The Saginaw has been picked up by the motorship Charlie Watson and is being towed into Eureka.
