Social Evening at M. E. South

A group of about eighty persons were present at the social given at the Methodist Church South on Wednesday evening. A very interesting program was given, consisting of a piano solo by Mrs. M. F. Hill, songs by Mrs. J. W. Miller, reading by Mrs. Fred Lorenz and a vocal trio by Mrs. Carrier, Mrs. Miller and Mr. F. G. Leslie. The program was splendidly rendered and the numbers greatly appreciated by the audience. Following the program a social hour was spent in the church hall and refreshments were served. The affair was under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society of the Church.

K. of P. Social Evening

The monthly social evening entertainment of the Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters occurred on Tuesday evening, Mar. 31st, at which time the members and a few invited guests enjoyed a splendid program arranged by the social committee. It would be hard to determine which feature of the program was enjoyed the most as every part was rendered so nicely. The Meville Quartet of Myrtle Point rendered several selections and the Pied Pipers orchestra kept the ball rolling with their jolly music, responding to numerous encores.

Mrs. Fred Lorenz and Mrs. R. R. Watson gave a number of readings and happy bits of humor which brought spontaneous applause from every hearer and many words of appreciation were accorded the ladies for the happy manner and splendid rendition of their part of the evening's fun and entertainment.

Everyone present was more than pleased with the Myrtle Point boys' songs, which they so generously rendered.

After the program those who wished to do so enjoyed themselves for an hour or so dancing, after which every one enjoyed a nice lunch which was provided by the committee.

Not Decided Yet

Editor Sentinel:—In the last issue of the Sentinel an article was published concerning the proposed plan for the unification of the two great branches of Methodism in the United States. This statement was taken from the article published in the Portland papers which stated that the plan for unification had been defeated because the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South had voted, by a close majority, against the proposal. At this conference is but one out of a large number of conference in the church, and as all the conferences will have to vote on the question, it is obviously incorrect to say that the action of one conference will determine the result in the entire church with a membership of over two and a half millions. The feeling that the two churches should be one has grown very rapidly during the past few years, and while friendly gestures have been made in the past by both bodies, this is the first time that any plan has been brought before the membership of the churches. Unification is rendered more difficult, of course, by the fact that the discipline of one church requires a majority of three-fourths, the other two-thirds, for the adoption of the plan. The present plan may win or it may be defeated, but it is morally certain that within a few years the two churches will be one.

In the Methodist Episcopal Church South all but four of the college of bishops, all but one of the heads of boards and general officers, and the great majority of editors, college presidents, and leading pastors are strongly in favor of unification. The opposition is based upon certain features of the present plan rather than union itself.

The statement is also made that the church in Coquille is the principal church of the denomination in Oregon. While the implied compliment might appeal to a desire for superiority, a regard for accuracy leads me to state that there are several churches of the denomination in this state which are superior to the local organization in the number of members, equipment, and in other resources.

Canaries Have Some Time

One of the participants at the farewell dinner given by the Cornfed Canaries at the Masonic Temple last Monday evening for Rev. C. S. Bergner, describes it as the wildest sober party he ever attended. The Canaries were there to have a good time and they had it. Those present were Mr. Bergner, G. W. Taylor, A. A. Sealand, Aaron Wilson, J. F. Cramer, C. C. Archibald, F. G. Leslie, and E. D. Webb, with L. H. Hazard and J. A. Lamb as guests.

Mr. Webb prepared the steak dinner and cooked it and from nine until twelve the bunch went through all the antics any kid every thought of. The only thing that kept them from serenading the town after midnight was the fear that the guest of honor might be caused to miss his train Wednesday morning if the cops heard the racket they were making.
