Two on a Liquor Charge

Late last Friday night when a call came in from Cedar Point that a car was stranded there without gas, Marshal R. L. Hollenbeck hurried that home might be at the bottom of the trouble and went out the highway to meet the car as it came in. He found Claire Dement and Carl Arness in it, both under the influence of liquor and placed both under arrest, after calling Traffic Officer Williams to his assistance.

They found a gallon of moonshine in the car. Both had to wear Arness away as the latter kept trying to slip up and knock the bottle from his hand.

Saturday morning the men were taken before Justice Stanley, who fined Arness $100 and sentenced him to 60 days in jail for driving while intoxicated. His driver's license was also suspended.

Dement was given a similar dose for transporting liquor, it being his car, and steps have been started toward confiscating the auto.

The men will not begin serving their sentences until May 1, as they told the judge they had left a donkey engine sitting in the middle of the road up Dement creek, which they had to move.

It Was "Sharky" Dunham

Be Thankful for Coos Weather

The Sentinel senior, who lived in Illinois from 1874 until 1921, found there the greatest extremes of this nature he ever experienced anywhere and recalls that while teaching school at Terre Haute, southeast of Burlington, Iowa, he saw a January day in which the thermometer registered below zero every morning in the month with about one or two exceptions. He also suffered a summer temperature in the same state that was phenomenally high for July, and so is not surprised to read that Chicago had a temperature of 90 degrees at noon yesterday.

Spring Here—Baseball

The microbes, bacilliferia, is beginning to circulate in the systems of the Coquille fans and talk is prevalent of organizing a team here with not more than two outside players.
