May Be Built Some Day

Forty years ago Albert S. Richardson's "Beyond the Mississippi" presented a fascinating picture of the rate at which the western half of our country was being developed. But his prophecy of the speedy completion of two lines of steel to connect the United States with South America, Chili and the Argentine, has not yet been realized, though that consummation as it seems now will not be much longer delayed. Just how soon, though a railroad trip all the way to Alaska will be feasible, the writer will not hazard a guess. The traffic with northwestern Canada is yet too meagre to warrant the construction of such a line.

More Railroad Than Europe

From a railroad pocket manual just received which gives the railroad mileage of all the continents of the world, including Australia, we learn that the United States has more miles of railroad than the continent of Europe (250,076 miles in this country against 228,641 in Europe), three times as many as Asia; eight times as many as Africa or Australia, and more than a third of the entire railroad mileage of globe. And yet twenty-five years before the writer of this item was born there were no railroads in the world. Nearly all the present 739, 808 miles now in service have been built during our lifetime.

Catch 'Em Young

Examinations of over nine thousand (9527) school children in three counties of Oregon, Coos, Douglas and Jackson, showed that about thirty per cent (2816) were substantially free from defects. The other seventy per cent of the children shared something like one and a half defects apiece among them, says Dr. Frederick D. Strickler, of the State Board of Health.

The main imperfections were those of teeth and of tonsils. Each of these affected about a third of all the children examined, 32.8 and 34.5% respectively. Underweight and impaired vision came next, with 20.4 and 16.4% apiece. In Douglas and Jackson counties, a little over one tenth of all children showed enlarged thyroid glands. While these figures may, at first sight, seem rather startling, they are really just the reverse. In the first place, most of these defects can easily be corrected. In the second, a number of them have already been eliminated, and the figures given present something of an improvement.

The low percentage of bad teeth is especially noticeable. Not that it is not high enough as it is; but still it is less than one-half of the amount usually found. This is due, in part, to previous examinations in schools, bringing this condition to the attention of the parents. It is also due to the work done by dentists in educating people to see the great importance of keeping their teeth well looked after, and having defects found and corrected at an early stage.

If we can get parents to see the equal importance of watching eyes, tonsils, weight and so forth, and the advantage of correcting defects while they are small, we shall in a few years show some improvement over the staggering figures revealed by the draft during the World War. As you all know, these figures showed that two-thirds of our young men, in the prime of life, were defective physically, and that one third were incapable of military service.

We cannot change these facts by shutting our eyes and refusing to acknowledge that they exist. But we CAN do something about it if we face conditions as they are, and set out to improve them.

At least half the impairments which lower physical efficiency in adult life can be prevented if they are dealt with in childhood, during school and pre-school years. They cannot be dealt with unless they are found, and found while they are still insignificant. This means that they cannot be left to be discovered by chance when they have grown so evident that even a fond parent will notice them. They must be revealed by a thorough examination by someone who is trained to give it, and can find them when they are not far advanced.

Two Birthdays Celebrated

The birthday party of James Frederick Watson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Watson in commemoration of his fourth birthday, was celebrated at their home on Spurgeon Hill with a birthday dinner at one o'clock p. m., Wednesday, May 20, and the afternoon passed in entertainment. It was also the 6th birthday of Harold Esser, in consequence whereof two birthday cakes were in evidence.

James Frederick as host occupied the seat at the end of the table and Clarabel, his sister, as hostess, was at the opposite end.

Twenty little tots ranging in age from four to two years of age were seated at the table and two of school age, Jean Ruth Schroeder and Harold Esser, came after their release from school and Donald Kramer, a babe of a few months of age, with their mothers and some older children of some of the families, composed the party.

Those present were Mrs. A. H. Bender and daughter, Dorothy May; Mrs. Oederkirk and daughters, June and Vernice; Mrs. H. S. Norton and daughters, Beverly Jean and Joy; Mrs. Fred Yastrough and daughter, Annabel; Mrs. C. C. Farr and son, Leonard; Mrs. Neil O. Watson and daughters, Jean and Dorothy; Mrs. M. R.
