Health of School Children

During the past year 3069 school children were examined by the Coos County Health Unit, of this number 813 were substantially free from defects. Of the defects found teeth and tonsils head the list with 45.7% and 43.5% respectively. Vision and eye troubles come next with 11.5%. Of the 3224 defects found 889 were corrected during the year chiefly by the family physician and dentist.

Although these figures appear unusually high this is not the case, as the general average the country over is higher. Almost without exception the defects can easily be corrected and should be taken care of at once before they become more serious or lead to other impairments.

155 children of the Marshfield schools were immunized against diphtheria by the County Health Unit and quite a number by their family physician. Marshfield was selected to start this work because of the several recent cases of diphtheria, but it is planned to take it up again when school starts in the fall and carry it through the other schools in the county.

Mothers of all pre-school children are strongly urged to have their children vaccinated for smallpox and immunized against diphtheria before starting to school. Pre-school children will be examined at clinics held in each town in the county during the summer.

Their Ford Turned Over

An auto accident out on the Pacific highway at five o'clock last Sunday morning resulted in a lot of bruises and contusions to a bunch of Coos county young people. Leo McCool, Floyd Goodrich, his sister, Mrs. Bertha Liebhart, and a girl from North Bend started home after the Strawberry Festival closed at Roseburg. After getting as far toward home as the county line they decided to turn around and go to Eugene. Just the other side of Drane the Ford coupe in which they were driving, jacked up, as they tell it, and went off the grade, turning over twice. The two boys and Mrs. Liebhart were quite badly bruised and cut up around their heads, but young Goodrich was the only one to suffer a broken bone, one of his shoulders being cracked.

All of the injured claim there was no liquor aboard and that the accident was due entirely to something going wrong with the car. It was badly wrecked, the top being mashed in, a wheel broken and a number of other breaks occurring.

An Obituary

George H. Sell, of Riverton, whose death we recorded last week, at the age of 83 years, lacking 25 days, came to Oregon thirty-five years ago, but married Elizabeth Knight who survives him, 45 years ago, so that the eldest of their 12 children were born before they came to Oregon. The names of the eight children now living are:

- Lewis Sell, of Coquille.
- Mrs. Bonnie Welch, of Riverton.
- Charles, Victor and Fred Sell, of Riverton.
- Mrs. Lottie Aber, of Coquille.
- Francis Sell, of the U. S. Navy, now in the Hawaiian Islands.
- Leonard Sell, now in the serial service in the Philippine Islands.
- Rufus Sell died in France during the World War.
- Joseph Sell died at Myrtle Point eight years ago.

The deceased was ill for seven months before his death, four of which he spent in the Keizer hospital at North Bend.

Bishop Shepard Coming

Officials of the Methodist Episcopal church will visit Coos county this week end.

Bishop W. O. Shepard, of Portland, of the area comprising Washington and Oregon; Dr. George Dean, rural secretary of the board of home missions, and Dr. S. A. Danford of Eugene, district superintendent for the Oregon conference, will be here to inspect Methodism in the county.

Sunday morning Bishop Shepard will preach in the Methodist church in Marshfield and Dr. Danford will preach at North Bend. Sunday evening the bishop will preach at Bandon. The three officials will visit Coquille and Myrtle Point Saturday.

On Baseball Team

Clara Belle Mintonye, of Coquille, has been chosen to play on one of the first women's honorary baseball teams at O. A. C. Women who took part in the inter-class games were scored on sportsmanship, playing ability, and faithfulness. The women receiving the highest scores were then picked for the teams by a committee of four. Miss Mintonye is a freshman in vocational education.

Why Don't We Brag More?

Dated at Portland Wednesday the Sentinel is in receipt of the following letter from Geo. W. Wells, of Los Angeles, who thinks we are a little slow in letting the world know about the good things we have here:

Dear Editor:—I have often read your newsy publication and as this is my first visit to your splendid Coos Bay district I thought a little line or so from a "died-in-the-wool" Californian might be of interest to some of your readers. We are touring Oregon and to be candid with you are more than impressed with your country. But why for goodness sake do you not let the world in on your good things.

Right at your very door you have "Acres of Diamonds" and you yourselves do not seem anxious to gather them in. What I refer to is your wonderful coal supply in the Bituminous Coal Company's mines. We visited the above mines one afternoon and were shown around by an elderly gentleman, who was very courteous and informed us that this coal was of a very high grade, and with such excellent transportation facilities as you have could be shipped anywhere. Well, what seems to be the difficulty quoth I—lack of sufficient interest I guess, said he. Man alive! If ever a real honest-to-goodness proposition exists whereby your district may become one of the foremost, here it is. An unlimited supply of wonderful coal. An absolute necessity and a product that could make you richer than oil or orange producers of our "sunny Cal." If we had this in Los Angeles we would have men demonstrating the same on the streets of New York and Chicago. The reason we Californians are such "red blooded boosters" is that we believe in our products and make the world believe in them also. Our Chamber of Commerce is alive to everything that will benefit any part of dear old California and said Chamber acts. If your coal can be marketed in large quantities you can rest assured we Californians will "grab it" at once because as I understand it can be bought cheaper than wood.

I hope you may publish this letter for I am not one of those Californians who see only the good in "Sunny Cal." We are neighbors and I honestly believe both states can be of mutual benefit. The Bituminous Coal Company has a wonderful thing. I do not know whether they are aware of it or not but I am fully convinced. Get the "live ones" around Coos Bay district to boost and I will wager a carload of "Sunkist" fruit that your coal will bring you population and wealth.

An honest critic and booster—Geo. W. Wells.

POULTRY

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT IS STIMULUS TO HENS

The use of some form of artificial lighting is a stimulus to laying hens because it offers more hours of daylight and increases food consumption. Its use is now generally accepted not as a proposition of fooling the fowls, but of lengthening the days and partially duplicating spring conditions.

There is some criticism of the use of lights due to the apparent bad results on the health of the birds that is often noticed in the winter.

Some poultrymen feel that if hens are fully matured by fall and are bred to lay no artificial stimulation is needed. Egg production from some flocks will bear out this attitude, but where comparative tests have been made between flocks lighted and unlighted there is no evidence to prove that lighting causes a greater chance for contracting disease.

"Lighting offers an opportunity for greater food consumption, making possible the manufacture of more eggs," says Prof. A. G. Phillips of Purdue university. "Late maturing pullets may be pushed along profitably by lighting in October. With pullets maturing early, a fall molt may be delayed and high-priced eggs obtained. In such a case there is usually a let-up in production followed by a molt in December or January."

"Where pullets mature normally in October and are in good condition of flesh, it may not be profitable to light them until November or December or possibly not at all. When eggs are wanted in January from the older hens that have molted in the fall, the use of lights may be applied between January 1 and 15."

"An easy time to turn on the lights is at 4:00 a. m., using an ordinary alarm-clock alarm key to connect the switch. The extra feed offered at this time should be grain consisting of corn, wheat and oats and it may be scattered in the litter the night before. At 7:30 or 8:00 a. m. more grain should be fed. A mash hopper containing 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds flour middlings and 80 pounds tankage, should be open all the time. About three times as much grain as mash should be fed when lights are used."

BETWEEN-MEAL MILK GOOD FOR CHILDREN

Relished by Youngsters During School Session.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
"Pleasant" or eating all sorts of things indiscriminately between meals is always and very properly, been discouraged by careful mothers. The habit of nibbling at cookies, cakes, or sandy tends to lessen a child's appetite for its regular meals, and in that way to reduce the amount of necessary foods taken at table, particularly vegetables, fruits, and milk.

There is something to be said, however, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, for the between-meal glass of milk especially for those who find it difficult to drink the necessary quantity with their meals. Many schools make a practice of serving milk to pupils about 10:30 a. m. Often this mid-morning glass of milk supplements a breakfast that has been too meager and eaten too hastily, or it may be the only time certain children can be persuaded to drink any milk. While not really a beverage, but a food, children think of milk as a drink, and either because they are thirsty by the middle of the morning, or because they see other children enjoying milk at school, they will take it then rather than at home.

Mothers find that after a full day at school, especially when the child has carried a sandwich lunch, he or she comes home at three o'clock quite hungry. A light lunch of milk and perhaps crackers at this time is often very helpful. The mother can consider the mid-afternoon milk lunch as a regular fourth meal for her child.

Handling Dough
When making biscuits, doughnuts, cookies and jumbles, the softer you can handle your dough after turning it on to the board, and the less you handle it, the better the results you will get.

All Around Our Neighborhood

You knew the Horner place was sold?

AND Sylvia Trude is the one who sold it. Ever since her cousin George has moved back to the Horner farm, but he couldn't even get a nibble on it. Some of the best land in the county, and yet no one seemed interested in it. Sylvia said, "You turn it over to me, and I'll have it sold within a week." All the family laughed at her, but George told her to go ahead. That was Saturday. The next Friday she drove up to George's place and announced that she had sold the farm to Bill Stone for sixteen thousand. "But," said George in astonishment, "I offered him the place for fifteen thousand, months ago. How in the world did you get him to pay sixteen?" Sylvia grinned and held out a placard she had hidden behind her back. It read: "Acme—Wet Paint."
