A Canary Bird Story

In the court house, in the little city of Ritaville, Washington, in the year 1911, there was hatched a brood of canary birds. Among the brood, was one little fellow, who was so small that his little mouth would not reach up high enough to get food when his brothers and sisters were in the nest, so we would take the others out of the nest while the old birds would feed the little fellow, and that is where he got his name of Tiny Tim, because of his being so small. As he grew larger and stronger, we noticed he would begin to warble when he put his head under his little downy wing, for he had no feathers yet, and in that position he would sing himself to sleep. Because of his being so small, he became the pet of the family, and was taught many tricks, and permitted to fly about the room. He developed into one of the greatest singers I ever listened to; he also developed a trait of fighting those who would pay attention to him, and if the cage door was left open, many times he would follow the hand of his tormentor across the room, picking, and with his little wings spread out, his little black eyes shining, showing his anger in every way he could, but as soon as he had won the battle, and driven away his tormentor, he would begin to sing, and would get down in the bottom of his cage, and jump up and down singing at the top of his voice. It seemed almost impossible that such strains of melody could come from such a tiny bird.

When Tiny Tim was quite young my sister and her husband came to our house for a visit and became attached to Tim and when they moved to a home of their own, we gave them the little bird and he became the center of attraction at their home. In moving about, Tiny Tim was transferred back and forward two or three times, finally ending up at Klamath Falls, with my sister and her husband. After being in Klamath Falls about two years they decided to go to California, and on account of the severe trip, they decided to leave Tiny Tim in Klamath Falls. They were away two years and finally returned, to find that Tiny Tim had refused to sing, or fight, or perform in any way, during the two years they were away, so they decided to buy Tim back, and within a very few days Tim began to sing, like a little bird, just warbling softly at first, but soon developed all of his old time energy. He would fight my brother-in-law and would sing as loud as ever. About six months later I came on the scene, and he was ready to fight, and sing for me just as of old, and now at the age of fourteen years, I believe him to be one of the greatest singers of the canary family in any country.—A. J. C.

So Big

BY EDNA FERBER

The story of a farm, the story of a city and eventually the story of a farm within a city. Even in its most sophisticated dealings with city life, Miss Ferber's story—the most successful American novel of 1924—is redolent of the soil, and alive with the beauty of green fields and the charm of fair landscapes.

The most vivid story of the Middle West during the last quarter of the Nineteenth and the first quarter of the Twentieth centuries that can be found in American literature.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Linger with Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Davidson, and two daughters and son, with a girl friend, Anna Smith, all of Marshfield, also Mr. Tremble, a brother of Mrs. Davidson, who has a farm between Marshfield and King's Landing, came up to the East Fork Saturday to enjoy the beauties of the scenery and overnight camping.

On her way home from Winlock, Inez stopped in Marshfield long enough to order a Globe radio of the L. L. Thomas Music Co. Saturday night Charles Oerding of Coquille brought it out and set it up. And we got some music quite late in the evening. Sunday night we were able to get part of the services of the First Presbyterian Church, Portland; also picked up Seattle, Oakland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. Monday Cecil Dugger came for a few minutes from his logging camp on Steel Creek with his high climbing rigging and after trimming the branches towards the top of a white fir, put the end of the wire something like a hundred feet or more from the ground and that evening we could tune in by eight o'clock.

The Dora school closed Tuesday with a picnic dinner followed by an entertaining program by the children and the teacher, Mrs. McLean.

Mr. Chappel, of Marshfield, put Mrs. Gearhart's piano in tune Saturday. He came out with Wm. Oerding.

One of the span of big horses owned by the Steel Creek Logging Co. got cast and died.

Be jubilant, be jubilant, be jubilant, my feet, for God is marching on. The Almighty and the Constitution of the United States still rule, not the mob vote of Oregon. Children are not creatures of the State, neither are they standardized bolts and nuts that you buy at a hardware store, neither are they Ford parts that you may get in a grocery store. Children grow into the state. They who make the state are not creatures of the a year.

Fire Patrol Starts July 1

Now, that the professional patriot cannot work the public school game to his glory and sanctification, he has lost his stock in trade and may no longer pose as a patriot but as a mighty small kind of a man.

The Sentinel's New Serial "Living," the gambler told his daughter, "is all mixed up. The more kinds of people you see, and the more things you do, and the more things that happen to you, the richer you are. Even if they're not pleasant things. That's living. Remember, no matter what happens, it's just so much—" he used the gambler's term, unconsciously—just so much velvet." Read the serial story soon to be published in The Sentinel.
