

EAST FORK NOTES

"Grandma" Shepherd, aged 93, who for several years has been in feeble health, died Monday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Al. Alford, who with J. D. Laird, of Sitkum, and Mrs. Anderson, of Klamath county, are the children of Mrs. Shepherd now living in Oregon. "Grandma" Shepherd knew the life of the pioneer in all its phases for she was one of the early settlers of Utah.

Friday night Mrs. Roy Luttrell, teacher of the Dora school, and the children gave a Halloween party at the school house. Planning tails onto a black cat, fortune telling, a bonfire and games with pumpkin pie and doughnuts for refreshments, made all those who were present know they had a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Custer and son, of Marshfield, Mrs. Custer, of Coquille, and Miss Lafferty had a picnic dinner on the East Fork Sunday and called on old friends.

It is reported that Walter Lawhorn is moving logging machinery on to Elk creek where he will log this winter.

Sunday we heard wild geese go over.

Mr. Shriver, of Marshfield, Presbyterian S. S. missionary, was on the East Fork last week. He stayed Thursday night at Mr. Leatherman's and had a new experience in his life—pumpkin pie and strawberries for supper. He had had pumpkin pie and strawberries each in their individual season for supper, never before the combination of pumpkin pie and strawberries for supper. Pumpkin pie for the 29th of October, that is the regular order, but strawberries Oct. 29 is something different. But then Coos county is something different.

It really looks as if the man who thought the League of Nations was "deceased" was a false prophet. The sun of faith and of righteousness has not set. It still shines and gives light, warmth and growth to the visions of mankind who tune in to the things eternal.

R. A. Easton.

One Oregon community, at least, is practically unanimous in favor of needed improvements. Wednesday of last week Wedderburn at the mouth of Rogue River, voted with only one dissenting voice in favor of buying a site and erecting a $4,000 school building. The vote stood 14 to one.
