Should a Young Man Marry?

In an article about "Getting on in the World," Henry Ford talks about "The Better Half of Success." In this week's Saturday Evening Post. What he says is worth reading:

As to college education, it is a subject that does not require so much courage to discuss as it did before college presidents themselves began to tell the truth about it. When a few years ago one said that college was not for everyone it was a dreadful heresy, but now the college authorities themselves say so. My observation has been that with or without college, a wide-awake boy of good type will attain a disciplined mind and a useful career. But here again we find that if a boy wants college there never was a time when it was easier to get—almost too easy. The ease of getting it has decreased its benefits. Boys planning a professional career need college. But with the colleges themselves now discouraging applicants, a layman feels that he may leave the entire matter safely with them.

Should a young man marry? I certainly think he should. Women are so far ahead of men in intuition that a young man cannot be said to have acquired his complete mental equipment until he gets a wife. It is in supplying the woman part of the mind that the wife becomes her husband's helpmeet. There is in every man's wife the very help he needs, but it is his part to find and use it. Without any mystical or religious implication, I thoroughly believe that husband and wife make a divine combination that nothing can defeat—divine because it conforms to the law of life. Some thing guides young people to their predestined life companions—when they are the right sort of people to be guided. The young man ought to begin early to acquire a home and a wife. A successful marriage is life's chief success. I have observed that people who wait too long and wed calculatingly seldom choose as wisely as do young people.

Success is not rare; it is common. Very few miss a measure of it. It is not a matter of luck or of fighting—for certainly no success can come from preventing the success of another. It is a matter of adjusting one's efforts to obstacles and one's abilities to a service needed by others. There is no other possible success. But most people think of it in terms of getting; success, however, begins in terms of giving.

Smallpox in Oregon

The seventy-six cases of small pox reported in this state last week indicate that there is something the matter with Oregon. If vaccination were compulsory and everywhere practised in the state no such record as that would be possible. This dread disease was more prevalent last week than any other contagious disease reported, and unless we pay more attention to vaccination it is bound to become a worse menace as time goes on. The report of 40 new cases of diphtheria in a week also seems to indicate that there is lack of needed precautions along that line, too.

The state board of health in its last week's report says:

Persons susceptible to typhoid fever, smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever may be protected against these diseases. In other communicable diseases we must still rely on isolation, quarantine, and disinfection. Disease prevention rests largely upon the avoidance of the causative agent of disease. It is important to isolate all persons suffering with communicable diseases.

Chickens as Sleuths

John Hinkle was arrested here in the little shack where he lives, just north of the Masonic temple, last Saturday, because the chickens of George Leach acted as stool pigeons. The birds had scratched up a pint bottle or two of moonshine, along the path down the hill from the alley between the Krantz and Leach homes, and when the officers entered Hinkle's house they found another pint. A little excavating brought several more flasks to light.

Hinkle pleaded guilty in Justice Stanley's court here Tuesday to possession of liquor and is now serving out a fine of $250 at two dollars per.

EAST FORK NOTES

The Sentinel of 15th inst. stated that Everett Howe pleaded guilty to the possession of booze, "but claimed he was keeping it for his mother who was feeble and needed a stimulant."

Did it take "six stills" to make a gallon of booze stimulant for his mother? Was it his mother's stimulant that Blasca took from the Howe place, was picked up in Marshfield, and the reported fine was $500—and 60 days in jail?

Why was he so fast to break his mother's jug of stimulant medicine. Could he not have asked his mother to show the sheriff the doctor's prescription for stimulant medicine?

Everett's sisters must feel proud of him for mixing his mother up in the booze business. What object did he have in doing it unless it was to try to save his own skin? People overlook a good deal but when they believe man deliberately lies about his mother, than are they sure that the old question "Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots?" is undebatable.

As for the quality of the booze: Boyd Bruner and Cyril McCurdy came past the Howe place 24 hours after the stuff was spilled and they could not imagine what the odor of stench could be until they heard about the booze jug being broken.

J. T. Parks and Ernest Krewsen who are working at the Jeub and Dugger logging camp have five traps set which they look at as they go from and to their homes and have caught 3 mink and 2 coons. The mink they took out of the trap last week Wednesday morning and showed it to me as they went home at night. Ernest said, "it is the largest mink which I ever saw," and he has been trapping for a number of years. They have a trap set for a coyote at the Rose place. They saw it once when it crossed the road ahead of them near the Howard cabin.

Why should anyone on the East Fork hunt a balmy winter resort. Here is from a letter received from California. "For almost a month the San Joaquin valley has been enveloped in a most disagreeable, chilly fog, and it was our privilege to momentarily see the sun but a few times all the month. The last few days we have had some rain and some sunshine, so we are hoping the foggy season is over."

Every place has its advantages and its disadvantages. Coos county has advantages which are not to be sniffed at. And not the least is the all year around climate. R. A. Easton

Broadbent Notes

Mr. and Mrs. John Robbins motored to Myrtle Creek and back Sunday.

The Boy Scouts and Myrtle Point Junior High boys had a very interesting game Saturday night in the gymnasium. The score was 4-6 in favor of Myrtle Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Lillenthal visited with relatives in Coquille Sunday.

Naomi Roselle was taken to the Keizer hospital Thursday evening of last week at a late hour and a quart of water was drawn from around her heart. She has been ailing for over a year with complications.

Mr. Newhouse was surprised with a birthday party Saturday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lackey, Frank True, James Robertson, Wanda Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Newhouse and Hank and Andy.

The evening was spent in playing cards and a social time. Refreshments were served at a late hour and every one had a lovely time.

Verna Herman spent the week end with home folks.

Andy Newhouse won the prize in spelling this week and Vernita Bell in Arithmetic.

Mr. Cooley from Myrtle Point came out Friday and helped the boys to organize a pot-bo club. Those joining were Audon Warner, president; Truman Wagner, vice president; Andy Newhouse, secretary-treasurer; Lester Moll, Delos and Leslie Hermann and James Hamilton.

Everett Robbins and Frankie True went to Myrtle Point Saturday and got their registered pigs.

Pederson Killed by Auto

Lars Pederson, of Charleston, bound over to the grand jury last week for operating a still, was run over by an automobile on the highway between Marshfield and North Bend, a little before five o'clock last Monday morning, and died about two hours later.

Pederson had lain down on the pavement while drunk and gone to sleep, and was run over by Boyd Arnot, who was going home from work at the Coos Veneer plant. In the fog Arnot could not see the recumbent man until he was upon him.

No charge was filed against Arnot.
