Coos Sign at the Junction

The state highway commission is putting in at the junction of the Pacific highway with the Coos Bay highway, south of Roseburg, a three foot by five foot sign with arrows indicating towns and distances in the Coos Bay area, according to the letter received at Marshfield by the Coos County Good Roads Association from W. E. Chandler, of Grants Pass, divisional highway engineer.

In matter of erecting a permanent arch or lighthouse at the junction as proposed by the good roads association Mr. Chandler advised that it should be given careful consideration before the idea was fulfilled. Such an arch or monument, he says, should be of exceptionally permanent nature and would require a considerable outlay of money. It was believed here that the large sign as offered by the highway commission would answer the need at least for the present.

Forest Fires in Douglas

A string of from 25 to 30 incendiary forest fires were reported yesterday by the White Rock lookout to the Douglas county fire patrol. The fires were burning on the divide between north and south Myrtle creeks and, according to H. Q. Brown, supervising warden, offer evidence of one of the most flagrant cases of incendiarism to be found this year.

Crews of men are being rushed to the scene, and as the fires were discovered before they had spread to any considerable extent, it is believed that they can be controlled before any great amount of damage is done.

The DAIRY

PROPER PASTURE FOR DAIRY COWS

The feed of dairy cows is over half the expense of producing milk, and the amount and character of the feed given largely determine the production of good cows. Therefore the dairyman has on one hand the problem of feeding a liberal ration to his cows at all times so that good production will be secured, and on the other hand the problem of keeping as low as possible the expense attached to such a large item in the cost of milk production as feed. He must select feeds not alone for their milk-producing qualities, but also for their economy.

A good pasture crop that will feed the cows for one-half of the year without supplement, except for high-producing cows, is certainly supreme in the realm of economy. It relieves the dairyman of much labor in feeding his cows right in the cropping season and at the peak of the labor load, and, in addition, cuts almost in half the acreage of crops that must be raised, harvested, and stored for barn feeding during the year by permitting the cows to gather their own feed for six months in the open, under the best possible conditions for milk production.

The vital pasture problem is to select some crop that furnishes a large amount of feed per acre and especially one that furnishes an even supply throughout the summer season.

Sweet clover seems to furnish such a large and even supply of feed throughout the summer, and dairy cows produce so well on it, that a questionnaire was sent out to 81 dairy-men who had had experience in pasturing sweet clover with dairy cows. A summary of their reports shows that on the average three-fourths of an acre of sweet clover pasture will furnish sufficient roughage to keep a cow well fed for six months. Cows producing above 30 pounds per day should, of course, receive some grain.

The growing of sweet clover pasture causes a great saving of land as it requires only half as much acreage per cow as is usually devoted to blue grass, and, in addition, a very small amount of crops is necessary to supplement it while with bluegrass it requires from an acre to an acre and a half of supplementary crops.

Summer Grazing Mixtures to Supplement Pasture

Cows in good condition producing less than one pound of butterfat a day will undoubtedly prove most profitable on pastures alone, believes G. C. Humphrey, dairy husbandryman at the Wisconsin experiment station.

He suggests varying amounts of grain mixture be fed in addition to abundant pasture where a larger amount of milk is given. Here are suggested mixtures: For Holstein or Ayrshire cows producing 30 pounds of milk daily, 5 pounds of grain; 40 pounds of milk, 9 pounds of grain; 50 pounds of milk, 10 pounds of grain. For Guernsey or Jersey cows producing 20 pounds of milk a day, 3 pounds of grain; 30 pounds of milk, 6 pounds of grain; 40 pounds of milk, 10 pounds of grain.

Ration one to be fed when cows are on good pasture consisting of 100 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of wheat bran and 50 pounds of corn meal.

Ration two for cows on fair pasture consisting of 200 pounds of wheat bran, 200 pounds of corn meal, 50 pounds of oil meal. The third ration for cows on dry summer pastures is 500 pounds of corn and cob meal and 200 pounds of oil meal.

Dairy Hints

Provide fresh, pure water in abundance and easy of access.

The advantage of a scrub cow is that it doesn't take so long to milk her.

Clean the entire body of the cow daily; hair in the region of the udder should be kept short by clipping.

Why make the good cows support the scrubs? Let the scales and the Babcock test be your guide.

Home mixed feeds concocted with the correct proportion of different ingredients are now being successfully fed to young calves as a substitute for milk.

In milking be quiet, quick, clean, and thorough. Commence milking at the same hour every morning and evening, and milk the cows in the same order.

Milk utensils should be made of metal, and all joints smoothly soldered. Never allow utensils to become rusty or rough inside. Use them only for handling, storing, or delivering milk.

Have the herd examined at least once a year by a skilled veterinarian. Promptly remove animals suspected of being in bad health. Never add an animal to the herd until you are certain it is free from disease, particularly tuberculosis.

USE VICTIMS' HEADS TO SCALP "SPOOKS"

Murder and Sacrifice Religious Rite in Burma.

The head-hunting Nagas live in the mountain fastnesses of Upper Burma. Apart from head-hunting the Nagas are a gentle and industrious race, tending their fields and raising a butterfly in the London Mall.

Naga villages, surrounded by impenetrable barricades of thorn and cactus, and entered through a winding tunnel, the floor of which bristles with poisonous snakes set to kill unwary and unwanted strangers, are joined to each other by groves of sacred trees. Huge gnarled boles tower to a roof of branches so dense with leaf that not a gleam of sunshine penetrates to the gloom below. In sinister rows along these groves stand totem poles, garishly daubed with brilliant ochres and hideously carved. A human skull is impaled on the top of each pole.

When the head-hunters return with their victims a dance is held. The captives are given a good meal and dressed in the best clothes the village can provide.

Before their heads, hands and feet are cut off, the villagers apologize for any inconvenience this rite may cause to the victims and point out that they will be honorably sacrificed to the harvest-gods, that their skulls will grace the sacred grove, that their ghosts will share with the village army of other victims' spooks the honored job of scaring off the horde of jinn and demons which lurk around the villages. Intent, so the Nagas say, on bringing plague and famine to the tribe.

Follows an orgy of sacrifice, opium eating and toddy drinking; the victims' heads, hands and feet are paraded on poles through the opium and paddy fields as harvest thanksgiving tokens. With solemn rites the skulls are added to the grim rows of ghostly sentinels.

But the skulls must be those of strangers, the Nagas believing that if the heads came from the shoulders of Naga tribesmen the ghosts of the victims, instead of staying in the grave by their skulls, would hunt the villagers and wreak more spiteful damage than the very jinn and demons which they should drive away.

Almost Too Playful

Don Carlos, of Jerotuna, is only a pup as yet, but his owners, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, Md., expect that he will be a big dog if he lives to grow up. At present he weighs 150 pounds, stands 31 inches high at the shoulder and can look into the eyes of a 6-foot man when he stands on his hind legs. He is a Great Dane. He is an ardent collector of door mats and similar things. Neighbors now write their names on their mats to expedite delivery and save confusion. Sometimes the dog's love of a good joke goes beyond that. A beekeeper, with his head covered in the usual mask, was deep in the business of corralling some swarming bees. The playful pup reared up, snatched off the mask and trotted slowly homeward with it, leaving the beekeeper involved in a cloud of insects and strong language.

Narrowly Escaped Death

Myrtle Point American

A Dodge sedan that was used as an exhibit, car in the Pearce garage up to Sunday night, was burned on the highway just west of Myrtle Point about 11 o'clock Sunday night and J. O. Fisher, Dodge dealer in Marshfield, and Mrs. Fisher barely escaped with their lives.

Mr. Fisher had a customer for a Dodge sedan in the Pearce garage, and to get the one Mr. Pearce had. He and Mrs. Fisher and the baby left for Marshfield about eleven o'clock, after putting the baby to bed in the back seat, Mrs. Fisher doing the driving. When a short distance out of town, Mrs. Fisher recalled that she had left her purse and some papers in the Pearce garage, and they turned back after them. They were riding slowly, when about a hundred yards beyond the turn off Spruce street, the car got too close to the edge and went off. Mrs. Fisher was in such a state of mind for a short-time she could do nothing, but Mr. Fisher broke the glass on the side Mrs. Fisher was sitting and pulled her out and then pulled the baby through the glass in the rear of the car. By this time the whole car was ablaze and Mr. Fisher's efforts to get some blankets from the rear of the car failed on account of the fierceness of the flames and the intense heat.

Mr. Fisher came to the Pearce garage for help, but when Mr. Pearce arrived at the scene the car was about all burned that would burn. The gas tank exploded after he arrived.

The car was a new one, which means there was no amount of oil and grease outside the bearings. It is thought the wiring was cut when the car turned over or the fire caught direct from the battery.

What was left of the car was brought to the Pearce garage Monday morning. It will have to have a new body, two rear wheels and a few other parts. One tire, the lens and light bulbs were stolen from the car during the night.

Two Long Island men living near the writer's old home have been placed on trial charged with digging claims with a motor.

Robin Hood Shoes

HEALTH

The foundations of health are laid in early childhood. This applies to foot health as well as the rest of the body. Feet cannot grow up healthy unless they have proper support as well as ample room to grow in.

This double purpose is accomplished in Robin Hood Shoes. Made over the well-known Footshaping lasts, they fit the growing feet properly. Support and protect their pliable bones and tender muscles, prevent corns, bunions, twisted toes, weak ankles and broken arches, and bring the feet to maturity in sound physical condition. Why not try a pair of Robin Hoods?
