Battle Bandits at McMinnville

Officers at McMinnville fought a gun battle Wednesday morning with three or more suspected robbers following the holdup of a garage at Dallas, Ore. One of the alleged robbers was reported to have been a woman.

At least one of the fugitives was believed to have been wounded. Blood was found on the front seat of their automobile which was found abandoned at the edge of McMinnville. The automobile was reported to have been stolen from Portland.

Chief of Police Grenfell and Night Marshal Casey, of McMinnville, fired nine shots at the fleeing machine in a running battle. The officers' car was hit by two bullets fired by the fugitives one shot going through the windshield. The pursuers lost control of their machine and wrecked it against a post. Taking up the chase on foot the officers found the fleeing car abandoned, riddled with bullets.

The front wheels ran over the child, and he died soon afterward.

Only 1 Cent a Pound for Myrtle

The Reporter in a recent issue reprinted an item from the American of Myrtle Point to the effect that the Macleay Estate company of Wedderburn was buying myrtle logs in that locality, for which it was paying 5 cents per pound, and then shipping them east. On closer investigation this newspaper find that only 1 cent a pound delivered at the railroad is being paid, and then it is for burly trees or pieces of burly for which there seems to be a fair demand in the east.

For a quarter of a century past many persons or concerns have endeavored to market myrtle logs, but finally ceased operations because they were unable to make a profit.

However, the Macleay Estate company is endeavoring at Myrtle Point, in Coos county, to develop some of this business, but so far the results are inconclusive.—Gold Beach Reporter.

Boys Working for a Trip

Members of the Arago Calf club, an organization of farm boys and girls of the vicinity of Arago, spent a couple of hours last week in extensive preparation for a campaign which they hope will win a trip to either the Pacific International Livestock show in Portland or to the State Fair at Salem this fall. Their hopes center on victory in the boys and girls livestock club judging contest at the Coos and Curry County fair in September which has for premiums; trips to one of the two larger shows where further competition will be possible.

Under the guidance of C. L. Griggs, tester for the Coquille Valley Cow Testing association, who has had considerable experience in livestock judging on college teams and in coaching juvenile teams, the youngsters practiced on a group of Jersey cows belonging to their leader, George Hampton, of Arago. The club members showed lots of interest and picked up the fundamentals of judging very quickly, according to Mr. Griggs, and after another practice period or two should have good chances of becoming one of the two teams that will represent the county at the fairs this fall.

At another meeting to be held within the month, sheep and hog judging will be demonstrated. It is hoped by members of the club to have L. J. Allen, assistant state boys and girls club leader present at this meeting.

"Either the trip to the State Fair or the one to the Portland livestock show is well worth trying for," declared Mr. Griggs, who assisted the state club department at both shows last year. "They treat the youngsters in great style, and, of course, they get to see the best things of the agricultural northwest on display."

At least four livestock clubs of the county are expected to enter the judging contest at the county fair according to the office of C. R. Richards, county agent, under whose direction the clubs are organized and the work conducted.
