Turnbull Is County Chairman

L. W. Turnbull, superintendent of the North Bend schools, has been appointed as Coos county chairman of the Greater Oregon Club for 1927 summer sessions of the University of Oregon. Superintendent Turnbull, who has taken much advanced work in the University summer sessions, is particularly interested in the 1927 sessions, not only because of the greatly extended program but because Coos county will be the center of two of the activities. The marine zoology and botany station on Coos Bay, under the direction of Dr. Harry B. Yocum, will provide field study for a large group. The Fourth of July excursion, scheduled for the large number of eastern and middle western teachers who will attend at Eugene, will be at Bandon.

Those who have been urging that the saturation point in the automobile industry would soon be reached perhaps did not take into consideration that in a dry country the saturation point is hard to reach. Christian Science Monitor.

And the saturated drivers are keeping the wrecking houses full and delaying the day when the saturation point of the automobile industry is reached.

Send the Sentinel to eastern friends.

The Arago challenge to a spelling contest was accepted by the Broadbent school. The sixth, seventh and eighth grades from the latter school came to Arago last Friday and made us defend our colors. We had to admit that they were worthy foes and made us look well to our laurels. After an hour's tussle we felt real proud of ourselves when their champion knight of orthography went down while we still had several confident though trembling, champions in the field.

The Free Travelling Library which we had borrowed from Salem is to be returned this week.

Forestry week has been observed in the Arago school by a study of forestry conditions and by an appropriate program. Many of the pupils have been busy making posters for forestry week.
