

You should be using Goodyear Tires

There are a lot of good tires on the market today—some not so good and some that are just plain "no good."

But among them is one that is the best. That's the one you want.

We have it—it's a Goodyear, The World's Greatest Tire. It's not the greatest because we say so.

It's greatest because of six definite points of superiority in materials and construction.

It's greatest because for over ten years more Goodyears have been made and sold than any other kind.

It's greatest because it is the acknowledged world's standard of quality.

It's greatest because more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

And it's greatest too, because in spite of its supreme quality it costs no more.

As a matter of fact you pay no more for a genuine Goodyear than you are asked to pay for many unknown tires of doubtful worth.

Your size is here and our prompt, expert, courteous service goes with every one we sell.

Many From Here at Roseburg

Close to a thousand were present at Roseburg last Sunday for the shoot and salmon bake provided by the gun club of that city. C. D. Ray, of the Coquille Rod & Gun Club, was high man for the day, winning the handicap match, the doubles and standing third in the hundred shoot.

The gun club of Roseburg served a very fine spread for its guests and there was salmon enough for the entire crowd, and a second helping in many instances.

Those going from Coquille were Messrs. and Mesdames E. A. Woodyard, Jas. W. Laird, O. T. Gant, F. C. Bunch, A. J. Sherwood, T. B. Currie, G. Earl Lowe, R. B. Miller, Ray Jeub, E. D. Graham, Bert Kay, F. C. Hudson, F. C. McNelly, Dan Brown, H. W. Pierce, M. J. Hartson, Geo. Lorenz, A. B. Collier, Mrs. A. M. Fish, Mrs. Fred Sample, Mrs. Merle Pettit, Misses Della Sherwood, Mildred Chapin and Jeannette Pook and Messrs. A. W. Chapin, Ambrose Chapin, Jas. M. and C. G. Caughell.

Heavier Breeds Useful for Raising Broilers

Heavier breeds should be used for broiler production, even though they do mature slightly less rapidly than light breeds. Any of the heavier breeds will be found satisfactory—the particular breed adopted for the purpose depending for its success upon the way it is handled. Just as we often make the statement that there is no best breed for egg production, so we will make the statement that there is no best breed for broiler production. There is a greater variation between the individuals within a breed than there is between breeds, and for this reason it is advisable to select the best that the breed offers and then proceed to handle the flock in the most approved manner to get the best results possible.

Close Inbreeding With Turkeys Is Dangerous

Close inbreeding with turkeys, as with all forms of live stock, must be carefully guarded to safeguard vitality. If you had but one old turkey hen so that you know that the young ones are full brother and sister, there might be some danger in mating them, unless they are all especially strong and well developed. If you had more than one hen last year so that these birds might be only partly related the dangers would be much lessened; but vitality and development are essential even there and must always be guarded.

Favor White Hollands

White Holland turkeys are greatly esteemed by those who raise them. They are inclined to be more docile than the other breeds. Probably they are not quite as vigorous. The question of health is one of foundation stock and care.

Undoubtedly the feathers of the White Holland are more highly prized than those of other breeds. The Bronze is the largest breed and undoubtedly excels the other in vigor and vitality.

Renewing Hen Flock

It may not pay to replace entirely your older hens with pullets every year, especially if you have Leghorns which are likely to lay pretty heavily in their second season. The cost of raising an entire new flock may offset the gain from a larger egg yield. But about half the older birds ought to be replaced with pullets, and the sale of the old hens and broilers, together with the heavier egg production will usually show a profit from this course.
