Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lawhorn, and daughter, Lou, spent the 4th with relatives at Reedsport, Ore.

Although it rained all day the Fourth of July, the people of the valley had a very enjoyable time in the community building with a table just groaning with good things, plenty of ice cream and lemonade. Everyone went away wishing that the Fourth of July would come oftener.

Several of the young people of the valley attended the dance at Gravel Ford the evening of the Fourth, while some of them went on to the show in Coquille.

Frank English and wife from California have been visiting his mother and two brothers the past week.

After two weeks' absence T. S. Wina returned to bring the Four-square Gospel message to the people of Brewster valley Thursday night, accompanied by his wife and two daughters.

Win and Polly Nickason and two children and Daisy Laird had business in Coquille Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Epperson and small son moved to the valley Saturday and are living in the Julius Benham cabin while Mr. Epperson is employed in Kenneth Laird's cedar camp.

Mr. Lawrence of the Four Square church, preached in the community building Sunday morning and evening. His subject in the evening was "Supper time."

Kenneth Laird opened his cedar camp Monday and will employ several men.

Miss Lydia Peterson from Bandon came to the valley Monday to visit her sister, Mrs. Lester Mayne. Little Jackie and Alton Mayne are both sick with bad colds.

Several loads of haled moss have left the valley for Marshfield the last few days.

Chas. Wilson took Ella Parks to Myrtle Point Sunday to have Dr. Mast remove a large splinter from her thumb.

Daniel Parks is laid up with a carbuncle under his arm.

A man was in the valley Tuesday selling fish.

The weather is very warm and everybody is busy cutting hay.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Waggoner and Mr. and Mrs. Bonebrake from Marshfield visited at the Albert

Christensen home Sunday. They returned to Marshfield in the evening, taking Christina Christensen back with them for several days' visit.

Edwin Crowley had the misfortune to run a snag in his foot while in swimming Monday, laying him up for a few days.

Kenneth and Hazel Taylor made a trip to Bandon Sunday. Kenneth returned but Hazel stayed down for a couple of weeks vacation.

Mrs. Wilma Shepherd made her folks a visit Sunday.

Western Savings & Loan Assn.

Through the plan offered investors by the Western Savings & Loan Association of Portland, no loss of interest need be suffered by people who wish to reinvest their July funds or to make new investments on the half-year period. Full interest at 6% from July 1 will be paid by the Western to purchasers of paid-up certificates before July 12. These certificates are issued by the Western in amounts of $100 up to $9,900 and on large investments these 12 days of full interest mean a savings of thousands of dollars to Oregon investors.

There are a number of special features of these paid-up certificates of the Western Savings and Loan Association, according to Fred G. Wills, secretary, which make them ideal investments for people of all classes. The money is always available in time of emergency, while the security back of each certificate amounts to more than double the face of the certificate, and is held in trust by the state, under whose supervision the Western operates.

The Western is also offering other savings plans for the investors, all backed by selected first mortgages on improved Oregon real estate. The company itself has resources well over $1,360,000 while the security back of the investment certificates and other savings accounts amounts to well over $2,000,000. A recently opened account of the Western which has become very popular is known as the 5-point 5-per cent account. Mr. Wills has offered to send full information on any of the Western's savings plans to anyone who is interested. The company also makes loans to finance the building or remodeling of homes.

Their adv. appears elsewhere in this issue.

They called her a soulless "gold-digger" but...

DO you remember the sensational breach of promise suit, a few years ago, by a humble flower-girl against her young millionaire lover and his wealthy mother? At the trial many ugly charges were hurled at the girl. She was called a "gold-digger," a blackmailer; a shameless creature who loved only money and the luxury money could buy.

But when, in a voice broken by sobs, she told her pitiful story, men hardened to sorrow wiped their eyes furtively—women "in the court-room wept aloud.

Then came that dramatic and unlooked-for conclusion. An unexpected witness was called to the stand—and in ten words hurled into the tense silence of the crowded court-room a bombshell that reverberated to the ends of the earth.

Most people were stunned by the unexpected outcome of the trial. Even today few suspect the true history of events behind that tremendous drama of intrigue, suffering and deathless love.

But now the entire story has been told by the girl who was the central figure in that amazing drama. Told in words that will bring tears to your eyes—tears of joy, of sorrow, of understanding and sympathy.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the laxative, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation.

OREGON EDITORS MEET AT CRATER LAKE

CRATER LAKE LODGE, Oregon. (Special)—In southern Oregon, 60 miles north of California, stands the broken remnant of a once mighty mountain. It is its ancient crater bowl lies one of the world's scenic wonders—a lake whose romantic setting and bewitching coloring are unduplicated anywhere.

This broken mountain itself is still lofty, its upper crags soaring 7,000 to 8,000 feet above the sea. The lake is over 1,000 feet below their summits, and is one of the deepest fresh water lakes on earth. The mountain crags, the lake, and the surrounding territory of mountains, pinnacles and forests are collectively known as Crater Lake National Park.

The story of Crater Lake and how it came into being was one of the most fascinating features of two state editorial association meetings here during the week of June 25 to July 2. During the early part of the week the California State Editorial Association, led by its president Friend W. Richardson, was welcomed at this great resort, and immediately following them, on Thursday, the Oregon State Editorial Association convened for its annual meeting. All members of both organizations were guests of R. W. Price, manager of the Crater Lake Lodge.

With Robert W. Sawyer, publisher of the Bend Bulletin and president of the Oregon State Editorial Association, presiding, the Oregon delegation held one of the most interesting meetings in the history of the organization. Members present heard the report of the activities of the new field manager, Harris Elsworth, and listened to a number of noted speakers. Local and state problems were also discussed during the meetings.

Visiting newspapermen from Oregon and California learned that Crater Lake's dwelling place, Mount Mazama, is about 10 miles north of Mount Shasta. California's great sleeping fire mountain, and is a true member of that chain of extinct volcanoes that includes Rainier, Adams and St. Helens in Washington, and Hood, Jefferson and the Three Sisters in Oregon—all snow-capped peaks today of rare scenic loveliness—and Lassen, the still smoldering volcano of California. Mount Mazama's fires, however, are utterly stifled. Its day as a fire-breathing mountain has been over for untold centuries. Its loftiest crag is now but 8,156 feet above sea level. Yet there was a time when this mountain was probably equal to Rainier and Shasta, perhaps overtopping 15,000 feet.

Created by the volcanic forces that cast up its neighbors, Mount Mazama, like them, grew cold. There came a day when great glaciers gathered. Such glaciers may still be seen upon Rainier, Adams, Hood, Shasta and other volcanic cones of the Pacific Northwest.

Yet Mount Mazama is only 7,000 to 8,000 feet high today. What became of the rest of it? Evidently there was a vast cataclysm of nature that carried the upper half of Mount Mazama away, leaving a yawning depression. But surrounding plains of Oregon do not show debris of an explosion. Yet seven-teen cubic miles of rock and lava have vanished from the earth. The conclusion of geologic science is that the entire upper half of Mount Mazama fell in upon itself. But this is only half the story.

The resulting crater, or "caldera," 6 miles long and 5 miles wide, had been heated and cooled by the falling rains and snows of ages. This precipitation, rising foot by foot, has covered over the great pit to a depth of nearly 2,000 feet. The site of the vanished summit is thus covered by a vast glittering lake at deepest indigo.

And what a lake! In 1853 a party of prospectors were ranging over the Cascade Range in search of a lost mine. The mine was never found. But the mule of one rider stopped suddenly, his forefoot planted at the brink of a mighty crater. It was then that Crater Lake, bluest of the blue lakes of nature, was first beheld by white men's eyes.

For years after the great discovery, Crater Lake remained accessible only to travelers on horseback. But every party that reached the spot brought back stories of the witchery and mystery of this fresh water lake without visible outlet.

And so the varied wonders of Crater Lake came to be known; its blue waters and its painted cliffs, and the prospects that could be obtained from those cliffs, Lazo Rock, the Watchman, the Cloud Cap, Glacier peak, Garfield Peak, Vidale Peak and others. It was recognized that here was one of the most interesting scenic spots in the West. So it was made a National Park, and set aside as a place of public recreation for all time.

Newspaper men of both states, some of whom visited the lake for the first time, were enthusiastic in their praise for the area and the lodge, and many are planning to return for longer stays later.
