COMPARISON OF THE TWO *The average thinking voter, whether he is a Democrat or a Republican' need but read one article that has been been published during the presidential campaign to convince him that Herbert Hoover is the man who should be chosen President, according to Phil Metschan,. chairman of the Republican state central committee The article referred to by the state chairman was written by Samuel G. Blythe in the September 15 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, and in part is as follows:

Therefore, let us regard these mer in that light. Let us look them over and examine into them with a view to setting forth their abilities' and capabilities, and especially their education and expericene along the lines that should be considered — must be considered — by the average American voter if he is to vote for what is most important to him-his country's prosperity and his

First, what about Smith? What is his experience and his education in affairs such as must be dealt with by a President who needs a business and conomic equipment in order to do his great share in maintaining this country at its present high point of prosperity and to assure the contin uance of this prosperity? Alfred E Smith was born in New York, was a poor boy in New York and has been elected governor of New York four times. He was educated in a pa rochial school; and, after various jobs in various capacities in and about New York, went naturally and efficiently into the Democratic politics of that city and presently became a clerk in the office of the commissioner of jurors. This was when he was in his twenties.

He was a member of the Assembly of New York from 1903 to 1915, beiker in 1913. He was delegate to the New York State Constitutional convention in 1915 and was elected sheriff of New York in that year. He served as sheriff until 1917, when he became president of the board of aldermen of Greater New York. He was first elected governor in 1919, and with the exception of two years, when he was defeated by Miller, has been governor since that time. During the two years Governor Smith was out of office as governor he was in the trucking business in New York City.

These two years in the trucking business comprise the entire business experience of Governor Smith, except that attained in his casual jobs as a boy and young man before he went into politics.

He is an able political administrator and has made an excellent record as governor of New York. He is a man of courage, attractive personality and large poltical attainments. He is an active member of Tammany Hall. His rise from a poor boy on the East Side of New York is remarkable even in this country, where so many poor boys have progressed to high place. He has a large and loyal following in New York, where his life has been lived. He has not traveled much, either at home or abroad.

Smith's competitor, Herbert Hoover, is a graduate of Stanford University, of California, and has honorary degrees from twenty-nine other universities, including five degrees from European universities. His training and life work have been along business lines rather than in politics. He is a mining engineer and has engaged in professional work in mines, railways and metallurgic works in the United States, Mexico, Canada, Australia, Italy, Great Britain, South Africa, India, China and Russia. He first stepped out of his profession and became a world figure when, at the beginning of the war in 1914, he became chairman of the American Relief Committee at Lon-don. He then became chairman of fees are added to the gas tax, and regard for he exalts homes and home the Commission for the Relief of Bel- the personal property tax levied in life, not the appetite of the rabole. gium, and when we went into the war the majority of states, Oregon ranks Administrator by President Wilson. zation Board, the Interallied Food Council and the European Coal Council, and chairman of several of these dies. He directed the organization of food supplies for many of the European countries during and after the Armistice and was chairman of the American Relief Administration engaged in children's relief in Europe. He was a member and vice chairman of President Wilson's Second Industrial Conference and chairman of the European Relief Council.

He entered President Harding's cabinet as Secretary of Commerce, which position he held under Presi-dent Coolidge and relinquished only after he was nominated for President. As Secretary of Commerce he has been in close touch with all business and economic conditions and developments in this country since 1921, and has expanded the Department of Commerce into what is the most efficient governmental organization of its kind in the world.

These eight years in Washington as a cabinet member have given him insight into and experience with all governmental processes, especially in their relations to business and economics, and he is conceded to have a wider, more accurate and more varied knowledge of the necessities of business and trade in all their branches as related to the Government, and the necessities and opportunities of Government as related to business and trade, than any man of our present or our past. He is fifty-four years old. Hoover is not a politician, His life interests and work have been in business, in production and distribution, and for the past eight years he has been at the root of all our business and economic conditions.

These, without embroidery, are the records of the two leading candidates for presidency, viewed in the light of the paramount presidential and executive need of the United States at this time and for the four forthcoming years. The average American voter, having his own best interests and his country's highest interests at heart, desiring the continuance of prosperity and the maintenance of our supremacy, should study them carefully.

them are the brass tacks of this campaign. Platforms, speeches, publicity, propaganda, radio, movies and all the rest of the ballyhoo are inconsequential. This is the vital stuff.

DEMOCRATIC CONDEMNATION It's something of a confession when a protagonist of Governor Smith admits that the democratic national malicious gossip to save its cause. is unused transportation

A GOOD automobile is built to stand years of use. It will provide many thousands of miles of satisfactory transportation.

But only occasionally are all its years and all its mileage used up by one owner. Many owners turn their cars in after an average use of only two to three years-long before the cars' lives have been exhausted.

This custom brings into the market every year so-called "used" cars which represent outstanding opportunities to buy unused transportation at low cost.

Every year more and more people appreciate this fact. Today millions of families are driving cars of which they are the second or third or even fourth owners; and this year the volume of new car sales and tradein transactions has created wider choices and greater values in unused transportation than ever before.

HREE out of five of the cars you see on the road have been purchased as "used" cars. You cannot tell-nor do you ask yourself—whether the driver of any particular car is its first owner, or its second or its third, providing the car looks well and is running satisfactorily.

The cars which General Motors dealers have accepted in trade vary in name, body style and price. Some have seen sturdy service; in others the potential mileage has scarcely been touched. And all offer a wide field of opportunities—

To the family wanting transportation at lowest possible cost.

To the family wishing to own a car of a higher price class.

To the family needing a second or third car to meet the requirements of all its
