Revival Services Begin Jan. 6

The New Orleans Times Picayune, one of the leading newspapers in the south, has the following to say concerning Rev. L. D. Coale, who will open a series of evangelistic services at the Pioneer church here the first Sunday next month, Jan. 6:
"There are evangelists who commercialize Christianity and by the employment of spectacular and sensational methods create a furore the result of which brings to their own coffers huge collections. Then, there are evangelists whose calling is sacred and whose messages are nothing but the simple Gospel story. Such men are not found denouncing sinners, but exposing the consequences of sin. These sincere evangelists come to a city and spend their vital energy for the bettering of humanity and are satisfied to live and let live. In the latter class belongs Dr. L. D. Coale of Los Angeles, California."

Chev Sixes on Display Saturday

Tomorrow will be a red letter day in Chevrolet history, for then every Chevrolet dealer will be prepared to display and demonstrate the new six-cylinder Chevrolet, whose recent announcement created one of the big sensations in automotive history. Hundreds of thousands of persons viewed the new Chevrolet six at the advance showing, but no cars for demonstration purposes were available at that time. Tomorrow will be the first opportunity for motorists to ride in the new six and judge for themselves regarding a performance ability which Chevrolet engineers declare sets entirely new standards in the low priced field. Reservations for demonstrations have been pouring in on Chevrolet dealers by the thousands, and it is certain that a busy time is ahead for the Chevrolet demonstrating fleet that will go into service tomorrow.

H. S. Programs on Friday

A committee of three has been named by the high school student body council to arrange for a special program every Friday afternoon during the seventh period. There are eight periods in a day's school work and the seventh is always devoted to some school activity, making it a part of the regular school work.

Every other Friday the program will be musical.

Last Friday's program was a Christmas feature, presented by the Torch Honor Society and it is planned that some organization shall present these programs, whether musical or special.

The musical program consists of student singing and is conducted by Miss Lucille Hoover.

Jail Arrivals This Week

J. H. Kelley was a new arrival at the county jail Monday. He was fined $240 and sentenced to 30 days in jail by Recorder E. A. Dodge at Myrtle Point for possession of liquor.

Byron E. Henry, for driving while intoxicated, was given 60 days and a fine of $100 by Justice Young at Bandon. He was lodged in jail Tuesday.

A Huge Egg

Geo. E. Binder brought in to the Sentinel office Wednesday morning an egg laid by one of his White Plymouth Rock hens which measured eight inches the long way and was seven inches in circumference. This is the largest egg we have seen for several years.

"Hatchery Chicks For Greater Profits" is the slogan of a national hatchery organization whose members are pledged to fair dealing with customers, and better chicks through improvement of their egg sources.

Proper feeding is half the battle when it comes to getting profits from the farm poultry flock.

Meeting for Sheep Raisers

Another series of meetings for sheep raisers is to be held in the county during the first week of January for which dates and places are given below. Similar meetings were held last March with good attendance and considerable interest. Coos county is well adapted to sheep raising but problems such as diseases, management and predatory animal control must be worked out in order to make this enterprise profitable. Of late diseases have been the most serious handicap causing an average annual loss of ten per cent and in some cases considerably more. These losses can be materially reduced by proper control methods and remedies. To help you solve the difficulties which you are sure to meet if you are in the sheep business is the purpose of these meetings.

H. A. Lindgren, livestock specialist, Oregon Agricultural College, will discuss with you some of the sheep management problems and also give you the best obtainable information on the outlook of the sheep business. Dr. J. N. Shaw, the veterinarian in charge of sheep disease investigations at O. A. C., will talk on diseases of sheep and if some of you will supply a sick sheep, he will perform an autopsy on it to show where the diseases are located and how to detect them.

If you are in the sheep business you can not afford to miss being at one of these meetings which are to be held at the following places and dates:

C. Carmen farm, Powers road, Thursday, January 3, 10 a. m.
Roy Garrett farm, Myrtle Point, Thursday, January 3, 2 p. m.
E. E. Weekley farm, Bridge, Friday, January 4, 10 a. m.
Langlois, Friday, January 4, 2 p. m.
Miller Bros., Coquille, January 5, 2 p. m.
—Harvey S. Hale, County Agent.

Christmas Exercises Were Fine

One of the week's finest Christmas entertainments was that in the Christian church Monday evening. Although the storm and the flu kept many away, the church was filled and each one present thoroughly enjoyed the festivities.

Fir trees at the door and on the rostrum were supplemented with myrtle tree tops all over the auditorium so that there were 35 Christmas trees instead of one.

The lighting effects, tinsel, arch and other decorations made a most beautiful and harmonious picture.

Before the gifts to the children were distributed a playlet was presented which made a decided hit. The plot, if it could be called a plot, was the part of a large number of children in giving an old maid a real Christmas. Not overly popular the children were first going to present her a lot of empty boxes and containers, but good nature prevailed and they presented her with real gifts, either in song or by speech.

Miss Bessie Lane was prepared to act the old maid part but was taken ill with the flu Sunday. Without any preparation, Miss Alta Sloan assumed the role, and by using her judgment as to the acknowledgement of the gifts, all of it impromptu, she carried the program through to a most successful conclusion.

Distributing Oregon Dainties

The present Christmas season brought a movement more extensive than at any previous time which will result in making Oregon products better known and more popular in the eastern states than ever before, and that will center favorable comment on this state. Reference is had to the thousands of packages of cheese, walnuts, filberts, prunes, etc. that have been mailed the past several weeks to friends and relatives "back home" by residents all up and down western Oregon. In this laudable combination of advertising and friendly remembrance, the dwellers in which their agricultural neighbors are engaged. Another thing that ought to be done is to see that the word "Oregon" is printed prominently upon every box and package of local product that is shipped out of this state. That is one of the ways necessary to secure proper notice and credit, says the state market agent at Salem.

Letter From Geo. Heninger

Writing from Milton, in eastern Oregon, to renew his subscription to the Sentinel, Geo. Heninger, a former Coos county citizen, says that his community has been very fortunate in being free from flu so far, but that we have had a few cases of smallpox and scarlet fever in a light form. Also we had an exceptionally heavy crop this year and a fine fall to care for it.

Rural Health Work Important

(Oregon State Board of Health)
Under modern conditions of transportation and travel, rural and urban health conditions react upon each other. The sanitary quality of the tremendous volume of raw foods now shipped daily through interstate traffic is of great importance, for both humane and business reasons, to our public and our private interests and should be insured by adequate, coordinated, joint activities of governmental agencies—local, state and U. S. Public Health Service. To undertake the sanitary control of interstate traffic by inspection and quarantine at our city borders and on our interstate lines would be futile and ridiculous under present-day conditions. Efficient local health departments in doing their work, perform duties of state-wide and nation-wide importance with which the states and the federal health services are concerned. Therefore, it seems, from a sanitary standpoint, reasonable and proper for state and federal agencies to encourage and help in the development and permanent maintenance of such departments.

Experience indicates that the best foundation for rural health service in the United States is the county health department under the direction of qualified whole-time county health officers. It becomes more and more evident to those with practical experience in the public health field that the agencies concerned with the promotion of specialized health activities, such as typhoid fever prevention, tuberculosis prevention, venereal disease prevention, or child and maternal hygiene, can perform most efficiently and economically by correlating their specific activities in with and making them a part of a well-balanced comprehensive program of local official health service under the immediate direction of qualified whole-time local health officers.

There are in the United States about 2,085 counties, including districts comparable to counties, wholly or in considerable part, rural, to which local health service under the direction of whole-time county or local district health officers is applicable, and in which such service would be highly advantageous. The number of these units of population in which such service was in operation at the beginning of 1920 was 109, and at the beginning of 1928 was 414. Of these 414 counties or districts 368, or 89 per cent, are receiving financial assistance for the support of their local health service from one of more of the following agencies: The state health department, the United States Public Health Service, the Rockefeller Foundation, or other agencies. Money invested for well-directed whole-time county health service yields to the average local tax-paying citizen an annual dividend in dollars and cents ranging under different local conditions from 100 to 3,000 per cent.

Over 80 per cent of the rural population of the United States is as yet unprovided with official local health service approaching adequacy. As a consequence of this deficiency, there is a sacrifice of the health and lives and the material resources of many of our people every year—a sacrifice which is needless because it is preventable, and preventable by measures readily within our means and demonstrated to be in the highest sense economical.—United States Public Health Service.

"Catching Colds" Costly

(State Board of Health)
Colds cost the citizens of Oregon over three millions of dollars annually. The population of Oregon is about eight hundred thousand. Assuming that forty per cent of the population are wage earners earning an average of five dollars per day, missing work two days due to colds represents a loss approximately of three million dollars yearly. All this loss is the result of a condition which is to a great extent preventable.

Fifty per cent of all absences from work lasting one day or more is due to colds. In addition to a loss of time, colds cause inefficiency. It is not possible for a person suffering with a cold to concentrate on his duties.

In spite of the different climates, there is a similarity in the occurrence of colds throughout the country.

The common cold is the most frequent of all acute infections. Colds are not usually considered a serious matter. However, the total cost of colds computed in terms of time lost, inefficiency, doctor bills, medicine, is greater than for any other disease. Its complications such as pneumonia, nephritis, heart and other organic diseases, make it a more important infection than tuberculosis or any other infectious disease. Colds are usually infections of the nose, throat, or bronchi. The infection is usually spread by direct infection from persons having colds. Sputum from individuals having colds is cast on the ground or floor and dried, and its contained germs are swept or blown about. Colds, while they are strictly infectious, are brought on by accessory factors.

These accessory factors are:

- Over-heated and uneven room temperature.
- Lack of sufficient humidity.
- Chilling or wetting of the feet.
- Fatigue and lack of sleep.
- Overeating and an improper diet.
- Defective air passages, diseased tonsils, adenoids, and sinus infections.
- Faulty elimination.
- A run-down condition with a special susceptibility to catching cold.
- Presence of an epidemic of colds that are highly infectious.
