Former Sentinel Editor Dead

Lew A. Cates, publisher of the Coquille Valley Sentinel during the year 1913, passed away at St. Helens, Ore., last Thursday and was buried Tuesday of this week at Salem.

Mr. Cates came to Oregon in 1909 from the east and in January, 1913, bought the Coquille Herald. He then purchased a half interest in the Sentinel from J. C. Savage, forming a partnership with him in the ownership of the two newspapers, which were not consolidated. Mr. Cates published the Sentinel and the Herald was leased to Percy Levar, who died some twelve or thirteen years ago.

In January, 1914, Mr. Cates sold his interest in the two papers to H. W. Young, who later bought Mr. Savage's interest and in 1917 consolidated the two papers.

Mr. Cates published a paper in Dallas for a year or so, then one in St. Helens. After disposing of the one there he engaged in the motion picture business until his death.

Mr. and Mrs. Cates made many friends in this section during their year's residence here, who extend to the widow their sincere sympathy in this hour of bereavement. He is also survived by three daughters, Mrs. A. L. Norblad and Mrs. Grace Carlson, of Astoria; Mrs. Ina Curtis, whose home is in Montana; and one son, Harry Cates, of Dekalb, Ills.

Mrs. Jennie Keller Married

Mrs. Geo. King, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Lafferty, was a caller at the Sentinel office yesterday morning, in company with Mrs. Jennie Price, who returned from Oakland last week. Mr. and Mrs. King reside in Alameda and arrived at Myrtle Point last Friday for a visit with her parents.

Mrs. Price informed us that her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Keller, was united in marriage, on June 15, to Claud Barrows, of Montesano, Wash. They will make their home there.

Had Earliest Potatoes

G. F. Vetter, of Arago, was a caller at the Sentinel last Saturday morning, and said that his new potatoes were the first home grown spuds to appear in the local markets this year. He began delivering June 8, and was practically cleaned out before the price began to drop as outside potatoes made their appearance. While gardens were late this year, he said that all of his vegetables did unusually well except his beet crop which the worms destroyed.

Smith Separator Plant Publicity From Portland

and direct connection from the dry kilns to the Southern Pacific is provided. The plant is laid out so that its capacity may be increased readily and there is additional space provided for more dry kilns.

The Coquille branch has gotten away to a flying start, has 200 on the payroll, and is operating day and night shifts, and is contracted to capacity for 1929. It is the first plant in the Coos Bay district to confine its output of Port Orford cedar battery separators to resawn and sliced material.

The Smith Wood-Products company is a subsidiary of the Ralph L. Smith Lumber company of Kansas City, Mo. Ralph L. Smith is president, George A. Ulett of the Ulett Manufacturing company, Boston, Mass., is manager of the Coquille plant. Mr. Ulett is also a stockholder in the Smith Wood-Products company.

Mr. Ulett came to Coquille from Needham, Mass., and took charge of the Coquille operations January 1. He obtained his first experience in the lumber business in the sawmills of western Massachusetts, where he became interested in the manufacture of battery separators. He opened a small rotary veneer plant, experimenting with Massachusetts woods, but after the superiority of Port Orford cedar battery separators was proven the use of other woods was abandoned. For the last seven years Mr. Ulett has owned and operated the Ulett Manufacturing Company, Inc., formerly of Medford, Mass., more recently at Needham, Mass., where the manufacture of the Ulett separator is carried on under the direction of F. S. Emery, former superintendent of William H. Champlin, Inc., of Bedford, Mass. Separators made in the eastern factory are chemically treated according to a process developed by Mr. Ulett.

The North Kansas City plant furnishes both dry and treated separators. The bulk of the output is Port Orford cedar, although some Douglas fir separators are made. J. F. Trimble, vice-president, is manager of the North Kansas City plant and Alexander A. Hamilton is secretary and sales manager.

The Smith Wood-Products Company, Inc., has a distributing factory in Chicago in charge of R. H. Starbuck. This branch is known as the Smith-Starbuck company.

Headquarters of the Ralph L. Smith Lumber company are in Kansas City, Mo., where a large wholesale business in ponderosa pine, Douglas fir, and Sitka Spruce is directed. The branch office in the Spalding building, Portland, is the Pacific coast headquarters. S. R. Smith, coast manager, is in charge of the Portland office, and in close contact with Mr. Ulett at Coquille.

Drowned in Three Feet of Water

E. C. Tubbs, of Tillamook, Wash., was drowned in three feet of water in Brushes creek, south of Port Orford yesterday morning when his car skidded from the highway and overturned in the creek.

Bernal Forty, operating the grade on the highway, saw the accident, and attempted to rescue Tubbs, but on account of the latter's size was unable to get him through the door alone. He went for help but Tubbs was drowned before he could return, and all attempts at resuscitation failed.

Although not travelling more than 35 miles an hour, the skidding occurred when Tubbs attempted to cross the ridge of loose gravel which the grader had scraped into the center of the roadway.

Pollary Sells House to Leeper

A deal which has been hanging fire for several months was completed Wednesday when S. B. Leeper purchased of Otto Pollary the four-acre tract and two houses, facing on the highway, just west of the logging road up Cunningham. Mr. Leeper does not expect to occupy the fine home there until his lease on the Rice place expires next year, but he will soon begin the construction of a model chicken farm equipment on the tract he has purchased.

Covered 29 States, 12,000 Miles

A note from G. Russell Morgan this week states that he and his bride had reached Heppner, Ore., after travelling over 12,000 miles and visiting 29 states and would soon be at home in Hillsboro. Besides travelling clear around the border line of the United States, they made trips into Mexico and Canada.
