Deer-Running Dogs

Deputy Game Warden C. A. Hearing this week brought in the head from what was evidently a large deer which he found last Friday, after it had been killed by dogs. Mr. Hearing did not state whether the dogs had made the kill on their own initiative, or had been set on by a hunter, but if a man was responsible he did not get any meat for the animal was intact except where it had been torn by the dogs.

But the owner is guilty in either event and will be subject to fine if caught.

Another case of a deer killed by dogs was that of Ray Grant, near Bridge. Mr. Hearing beat Grant to the deer and captured the dog, for which the latter had paid $100. He was relieved of further temptation by having the dog confiscated.

Mr. Hearing is determined to break up this unlawful practice and should be aided by those who know of its being done.

Two fishermen, charged with angling without a license, recently pleaded guilty in Justice Stanley's court here and were each fined $25 and costs. J. H. Kirkland, of Oakland, Ore., elected to serve his fine at the rate of $2 in the county jail. F. A. Rose, of Marshfield, was the other fisherman. He was arrested last Sunday.

SPORT BRIEFS

by Mark Sooley

Bliff! Bang! Thump Ouch! Oi Yoi! That sure was a set back the Coquille High School basketball team took last Friday night at the hands of the North Bend five. Of course, there was the usual rounds of alibis and I-told-you-so's about the defeat and to delve into the real subject of it would be useless for all of the large crowd who saw the game know the reasons.

North Bend played a wonderful game. They were on and with all the breaks coming their way. They played one of the best games ever performed by a team on the Community Hall floor. Their shooting was deadly with most of their shots being clean, dropping through the hoop without hitting it. The whole North Bend offense was speedy and it was always out ahead of the local boys. It will be a long time before another such display of basketball will be seen in Coquille.

What was the matter with our boys? That was the popular question Friday night and all day Saturday. Stale. That might have been it. Coquille has played very fast ball all season, with the exception of the opening game, and a break in their combination might have been expected. Sickness also played a large part. "Jug" Lorenz was in bed most of the week with a cold and a slight touch of the flu and he entered the game in a weakened condition. Anyway North Bend played their best game of the season while Coquille played their worst. Just the same old story of one team playing above their heads and the other cracking.

Louie Heller Dies at McKinley

L. F. R. Heller, logger and well-known resident of McKinley, passed away last Thursday after months of suffering from a bone malady that baffled medical science.

Louie Heller was a genial, well-liked man, who was popular with all who knew him, and who had a host of friends who sincerely mourn his passing.

Goat Gives Hard Battle

Water Superintendent Epperson had a strenuous five-minute fight with a large billy goat in the vicinity of Ninth street Monday morning. The animal had attacked Mrs. Don Estes and small son. She grabbed it by the horns and went round and round with the goat, until Mr. Epperson rushed up with a shovel and started a counter attack. But he couldn't get in a square blow on the head and finally broke the handle of his weapon, just as another man arrived with an axe and half cut the animal's nose off. Every time Sam struck with the shovel the goat twisted aside and took his blows on neck or side. The animal belong to J. O. Dow.

CAPONS PUT PUNCH IN POULTRY PROFITS

Demand for Capons Always Exceeds Supply and Much Greater Demand Could Easily Be Created.

"How about a nice capon?" inquired the butcher in an effort to be helpful. The prospective purchaser reddened slightly and shook his head. After browsing helplessly around for an embarrassingly long time, he finally compromised on a rolled roast.

As the customer went out, the butcher's shoulders were shaking with poorly suppressed mirth. "Damn fool!" he chuckled, "Bet ten bucks that guy didn't even know what capon meant. Did'ja notice how he blushed when I suggested it?"

I had to agree with my friend the butcher that the gentleman probably did not know what a capon was and that he chose something else in a vain effort to hide his embarrassment. I knew him to be a successful business man and one who rather prided himself on his knowledge of fine foods. Nevertheless, it was plain that capon was something entirely outside his experience. I would have been willing to wager, too, that this man's case was a typical one.

That was nearly two years ago. Today, although the market is capable of absorbing far more capons than are being offered for sale, it would still be safe to say that a great many people do not know what a capon really is. Here, in short, is a virgin field with such tremendously rich possibilities that one must gasp in amazement on realizing that it is practically unworked.

I believe that poultrymen are themselves to blame for this state of affairs. Many of them refuse to practice caponizing at all and those who do merely produce capons as a side line. For that reason, the supply has always been too small to justify any attempt at educating the general public into appreciation of the most delectable food this old earth has ever known. At least, there has been nothing better since the catering establishment on Mount Olympus ceased serving Nectar.

Of course, this condition will not last forever. Poultry raisers are not going to stand around forever and doing nothing once they realize that capons will bring 50 cents a pound or more when ordinary poultry is going for little better than half that much. Sooner or later they will get tired of seeing this golden stream slipping by them and they will start raising capons in earnest. In the meantime, if all poultry men everywhere who have never before attempted raising capons will give it a fair trial, just once, there is no question but what they will be confirmed converts forever after.

Incidentally, capons make excellent foster mothers for baby chicks, that is, they can be easily taught to care for and brood a bunch of newly hatched baby chicks and do it as well or better than a hen will. A capon, being larger, will hover from twenty to thirty chicks and they can protect their chicks from hawks, etc., much better than a hen. The capon's feathers are longer, softer and more abundant than that of a hen and his wing spread considerably greater. His amiable disposition fits him admirably for the task and releases the hen for laying.

How to Raise Poultry

By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S.

Caponizing, which is simply removing the reproductive organs of young male birds, is a very simple operation. A ten year old boy could soon learn to do it quickly and successfully and failures are practically unknown once the trick is mastered. Moreover, learning need not entail any appreciable loss. The first practicing can be done on dead birds and even if one or two should bleed to death, they are just as good for the table as if killed intentionally. Even if such birds represented a total loss, however, the sacrifice would be wiped out by added profits on the first few successfully caponized. Not only does the capon weigh much more than a cockerel of corresponding age, but its flesh is so much finer in quality as to command a far higher price per pound.

It would be useless for me to give detailed instructions here. They could hardly be made clear without extensive illustrations and, besides, excellent instructions are furnished with all sets of instruments. But just a word about instruments—buy the best. The difference in cost between the very best instruments and the least desirable ones is just a few cents after all. The extra profits on one capon that would have been lost with inferior instruments will repay the added investment many times over.

Almost any breed of fowl may be used, although there would be little gained in caponizing the small breeds. The best for medium sized capons are Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and others running about the same average size. These, when caponized, will run from two to four pounds heavier than the average fowl not so treated. Larger breeds of the so-called Asiatic strains (Brahmas) will rival turkeys in size (12 to 16 pounds) but—oh what a difference! There never was a turkey half so tender and toothsome as even an average capon.

It is manifestly impossible, in an article of this kind, to deal extensively with the habits, or methods of feeding and handling capons, nor should it be necessary. If, however, I can arouse sufficient interest in the subject to get poultrymen—amateur and professional—thinking and talking about capons, it will not be long before the public is much better supplied with a wonderful viand that they ought to know more about.

Editor's Note—If you are interested in instruments for caponizing, write to Dr. LeGear in care of this newspaper.

Tomorrow night Coquille plays Marshfield over there. The local team should win but a battle can be expected. Marshfield has a young team that is liable to strike a satisfactory gait any time and start to winning. With Coquille in good condition and with the boys wanting to make up for their defeat last Friday night the C. H. S. quintet will be fighting all the time.

The Bandon HI team won from the Myrtle Point five by a score of 10 to 5 in a game played last Friday night at Bandon. Tight defensive work on both sides held the score down with Bandon's greater knowledge of the floor coming out as a determining factor in their win.

The Marshfield HI team was defeated by the Myrtle Point quintet, 16 to 14, in a very closely contested encounter that went into an extra period at Myrtle Point Tuesday night. The score went first to one side and then to another throughout the game with Marshfield tying the count just before the final gun. In the extra period a field goal was the determining point.

The county-leading North Bend quintet was giving a scare at Bandon Tuesday night when they were just able to nose out the Bandon HI team, 18 to 17. Playing spirited ball throughout, Bandon fought their hardest and had the lead at times.

In the class "B" league the Arago team downed the Powers five by a 18 to 13 score, last Friday night.
