The Southwestern Daily News recently carried an editorial under the heading, "A Bunch of Silly Amateurs," in which it ridiculed the archers who have leased the hunting privileges on the Miller ranch in Curry county, for the coming deer season. About forty archers (whom the News editor is wont to call "arrow-men") will meet there at the opening of the season to hunt deer with bows and arrows. Among them will be found some of the finest archers in the country and some of the best shots from this district, all of whom no doubt recent being classed as "silly amateurs."

The editor of The News states that there isn't one chance in a million of game being killed outright with an arrow. Perhaps it would him good to look over some group of archers at target practice, making one bull's eye after another at forty and sixty yards. With their hunting bows and steel-tipped game arrows you can bank on it that there will be mighty few deer wounded, if any, that gets away. Men who have taken up archery are usually good rifle shots and old hunters and if they should wound any game they are going to track it down and not leave it to die, as hundreds of them are left in the woods by novices, who wound them with rifles.

Archery is a good clean sport and has come to us down through the ages and the man that goes forth to kill his deer with bow and arrow is really giving the game a chance and should be classed as what he really is—a good sportsman—instead of being held up for public ridicule.

Thousands and thousands of buffalo have been slain by arrows shot from the bows of the redman. In recent years, great bears, moose, elk, cougar and deer have fallen beneath the arrows of skilled archers and yet The News states that the Robin Hoods are all in the story books and that any man wishing to appear funny and carry on this scheme of adventure would find himself paying a stiff fine for deliberate and acknowledged cruelty. I would like to ask the author of "Silly Amateurs" how many deer he has ever heard of being wounded by archers.

I know of one deer hunter who wounded 17 deer before getting his limit of two and he did this with a rifle, which the News editor claims so easily dispatches any game.

When it comes to hunting either with shotguns or rifles there is always game wounded and allowed to die and as far as that is concerned the hunting game can be classed as cruel, no matter what method is used to take the game, so why should a bunch of good sportsmen be classed as "silly," belittled and sought to be held up for ridicule because they desire to hunt the wily buck with a bow and arrow?

During a trip to Crescent City last week via the Roosevelt highway I gleaned what information was possible regarding fishing conditions. At the present time on the Rogue steelheads and jacksalmon are taking a spinner but do not seem inclined to take a fly. The same conditions prevail, concerning fishing on most of the other coastal streams where the fish are striking. As usual the Rogue appears to be the favored stream for anglers.

A fine buck deer was sighted near Brookings and thousands of wild pig-cons were seen, the most of them being on the California side. The fields where grain was cut were blue with them as well as orchards all along the line. As proof that predatory animals are on the decrease along the coast, dozens of cotton tail rabbits were seen. These little animals do not exist long in a country that is over-run by varmints, for practically every animal of claw and fang that roams the jungles preys upon the rabbit.

Don Estes, while not bringing in the limit of big ones, nevertheless, caught a fine mess of trout the Fourth. I have both his and his wife's word for it, so—"check and double check." He is the only fisherman reporting this week.

I credited Hale Eubanks and wife with catching trout that averaged 10 inches in length last week. This was an error, as the fish averaged 12 inches.

Bogus Cloth Peddlers

Look out for these fellows; they may strike Oregon. The National Better Business Bureau of New York sends out warning that touches a swindling scheme that has been featured for years but is now even more impressive than ever before, since a new high tariff bill has come into the commercial life of the nation. A nationwide warning is going forward to industrial employes regarding the "whispering peddlers" of woolen goods. In this scheme the peddler has several pieces of suiting materials, in suit lengths, on his arm. He tells his prospect that they were smuggled into the country and since he is short of funds he will sell "the genuine English materials" at about half what they are worth. These goods are made right here in America and frequently they can be found in suits selling at low prices.
