ROUND WORMS IN SWINE HARMFUL

Injury Is Often So Great Pigs Never Recover.

The common round worms of swine are known as Ascaris Lumbricoides. They are commonly spoken of among veterinarians and parasitologists as Ascarida, but most swine producers speak of them only as round worms of swine.

The large round worms of swine attain a length of as much as 12 inches. The average size ranges from 6 to 12 inches and these worms are about one-eighth inch in diameter. They are pinkish in color.

When young pigs are very heavily infested with round worms the larvae (small worms) which find their way to the lungs in large numbers set up a condition of the lungs which is often spoken of as thumps. This is a form of pneumonia and is often severe enough to stunt the pigs to such an extent they never develop properly afterwards. Many of these pigs will linger for several weeks after severe round worm infestation and upon their death or being killed, if the lungs are examined, much evidence of the invasion of the larvae stage of the round worm will be found. The injury is so great with many young pigs that they never entirely recover.

As the worm eggs hatch out in the intestinal tract of the pig, the small larvae are taken up by the blood stream where they go to the liver and then to the lungs where they remain long enough to set up an inflammation which is often severe enough to develop into pneumonia. After a short stay in the lungs, the larvae travel up the trachea or windpipe and are resswallowed and then after finding their way to the intestines of the pig, develop into full size worms. This requires about two and one-half months.

It is estimated that a full-grown female round worm in the intestines of the hog may produce as many as 80,000,000 eggs. From this it is evident how great the contamination of hog yards and quarters must be after a number of worm-infested pigs have been kept in them for several weeks.

The eggs of the round worms are very resistant to weather conditions and to many chemicals. It is not known just how long the eggs will remain alive, but it is safe to conclude that the majority of worm eggs will remain alive for more than one year under ordinary farm conditions. Round worm eggs are resistant to many chemicals. This is due to the fact that they are encased in a tough gelatinous membrane or capsule. In order to destroy these round worm eggs, it is necessary to use some caustic material which will dissolve this membrane covering. The best product that we know of for this purpose is concentrated lye which should be used in boiling water—one pound to each ten gallons of boiling water. This solution will destroy practically all round worm or other worm eggs with which it comes in contact.

Feed Separately Ewes

With Twins or Triplets

Ewes with twins or triplets really need more feed than a ewe with a single lamb and if you can go to the trouble of feeding them separately you will find it a great help in making twins as good as singles. Give these twin and triplet rations all the grain they will clean up in a few minutes, twice daily, and all the clover or alfalfa they want. Also these twin and triplet lambs need a creep and special feed more than single lambs. A good creep feed for young lambs is first bran and oil meal mixed, then add ground oats, then ground corn. In a short time they will eat whole oats but one must grind the corn for a long time. Creep fed lambs go to market earlier, grade higher, weigh more and worry their mothers less. They will pay a mighty good price for the grain they eat.

Hogging Off Crops

For ten years, peas and corn have been grown for hogging-off at the Edgeley substation, North Dakota. The cash returns per acre from the peas ranged from $18.05 to $32.92; corn, $20 to $62.04. In four years, returns from peas were not great enough to show a profit; in the other six years the profit ranged from $1.99 to $20.28 per acre. The daily gain per hog on peas was from .95 to 1.33 pounds; on corn, 1.26 to 1.7 pounds. In five years peas produced more pork than corn.

Animals for Breeding

Proper feeding is very important, but it is by no means the only thing for the farmer to consider. Breeding is at least of equal importance with feeding. It is a well recognized fact among breeders of registered live stock and feeders of experience. Judging from the small percentage of pure-bred stock we have in this country, however, it is but fair to assume that the majority of live stock producers do not appreciate the value of improved blood for breeding purposes.
