

Dairy production increased
72 times in decade

When Madison County, Idaho, first began practicing better breeding total value of dairy products was $3161—$243 per month—$8.78 per day. Within ten years the value reached $227,442—$18,953 per month—$623 per day.

This and other improved farm practices are endorsed by Pacific International Livestock Exposition, the 29th Annual of which will be held Portland, Oregon, Oct. 25-Nov. 1. Features this year include exhibits of pure-bred Livestock, Fat Stock, Poultry, Rabbits, competing for $100,000 in Premiums; 4-H Club and Smith-Hughes Junior Agricultural Activities and Inter-Collegiate Contests; dedication of new T. B. Wilcox, Jr. Hall; and world-renowned Horse Show.

The Coquille Banks are vitally interested in every effort directed towards improving farm practices—increasing farm profits and gladly join with Pacific International in urging general attendance at this year's Exposition.

Coquille Boy Wins

Fay Holvenstott, a student in Coquille High School, again won the grand prize at the Coos and Curry County Fair. This prize, a purebred Jersey calf, offered by L. H. Pearce, secretary of the Coos and Curry County Fair, was given to the boy taking Smith-Hughes Agriculture, who had the best project in the county.

Fay's project consists of pure-bred Chester White hogs and are recognized for their prolificity. The past year he has raised 52 hogs, finding a ready market for them all. His exhibit at the fair consisted of 2 sows with litter and two gilts. While at the fair Fay disposed of 15 of the small pigs at a fancy price for breeding.

Fay has full ownership and has worked out a pasture rotation, enabling him to feed at a minimum cost, which greatly increases his net profit. His project is recognized as one of the best and most profitable in the state. His net return this year was about $1000.

This year the Coquille Smith-Hughes department had a larger exhibit than in previous years and won many premiums. They secured 63 ribbons in all, consisting of 34 first places, 25 second places and 4 third places. These ribbons were won in both the open classes and in Smith-Hughes competition.

The increased interest in exhibiting at the fair this year was largely due to the fact that the Lions clubs of Coquille, Myrtle Point and Bandon, each offered a pure-bred prize for the best exhibit of sheep, hogs, dairy calves and poultry. Competition for these prizes was very keen and they were greatly appreciated by the boys.

Russell Martindale, with his exhibit of pure-bred Dorset sheep, won $52 in cash premiums, with 10 blue ribbons and 4 red ones.

Each boy that enrolls in Smith-Hughes work is required to carry a project. These projects are run on a business-like basis and wherever it is possible more than one enterprise is carried. As a result many of the boys will have, on completing their high school course, enough money to finance themselves through college or for a fine start in some phase of agriculture. Many of the boys have splendid nucleus for a dairy herd and intend following the dairy business.

No boy is allowed to complete a year of this work without specializing in some one thing, in order that he may be well-versed in some one line.

The average net income last year on all the projects was $102.80, but this year it should be much higher.

In order to reach those boys who live in the outlying districts and who have not graduated from the eighth grade, any town or country boy who is not in school, whether they have completed high school or not, or any adult who might be interested, a part-time school will be started in October. This school will meet twice a week in the evening at the high school. The school will be under the supervision of W. M. Cuning, local Smith-Hughes instructor, and anyone interested should get in touch with him as soon as possible.

In connection with the showing made by Coquille High boys at the fair too much credit cannot be given Mr. Cuning, who came here in August, 1929, and this year's fair was the first for which he had had a year to prepare his class. The Smith-Hughes class of C. H. S. showed 100 per cent at the county fair last year, but the projects only totalled 14; this year with its 42 projects, the class again showed 100 per cent.

Mr. Cuning is popular with the boys, he knows his stuff, and the result of his work here will be a benefit to the members of his classes all through their lives.

Coos Has Fine Exhibit

Coos county is winning more than its share of honors at the state fair this week.

The county's booth in the agricultural pavilion in charge of George Jenkins, of Coquille, county agent, assisted by J. L. Smith, of Coquille, and George Hampton, of Arago, is attracting much attention from fair visitors who have been thronging this pavilion all week. The booth features cheese and the justly famous myrtle wood for which this section of the state is noted. A prominent electric sign spelling out the name "Coos" tops the exhibit and a large pasteboard cut-out of a dairy cow occupies a prominent place in the background of the display. Beneath the cow is the slogan, "Where the pastures are always green" while another sign invites the world to "Coos for Dairying."

Besides the stock judging winners and the livestock awards, mentioned elsewhere in an article from County Agent Jenkins' office, another team, also from the Coos River district, composed of Laurence Burns, Rose Christensen and Jack Christensen, placed second in the poultry judging contest among the Four-H clubs with seven team entered.

Democratic Candidate at M. P.

Taxation reform is one of the crying needs of Oregon, that home owners and farm owners as well as the owners of small businesses may be relieved of the unjust burden they now carry, declared Senator Edward F. Bailey, democratic candidate for governor, speaking at Myrtle Point last Friday afternoon.

"The tax burden on real and personal property should be equalized through the adoption of a state income tax and by rigid enforcement and honest administration of the tax uniformity and equalization laws," said Senator Bailey, who called the attention of his hearers that he is the only candidate who, in his platform, advocates the income tax.

"All revenues necessary for operation of state government should be obtained from sources other than the property tax," he declared.

Senator Bailey reiterated his position favoring public development and public ownership of electric power on a sound business basis, and also his position favoring a change in the personnel of the public service commission so that it will be a better instrument for the people as against the utilities.

Mr. Bailey was introduced by Geo. Belloni, of Coquille, democratic candidate for the legislature from Coos county, whose introductory talk has been very favorably commented on by those who heard him.
