Missionary Society Meets

The Missionary Society of the Church of Christ met at the home of Mrs. Martha Mulkey Wednesday afternoon. Fifty calls were reported in the interest of the society for the past month with many more to make. The program was conducted by Mrs. V. L. Bailey, the subject being a study of the mountain states and their great need of aid during this drought period. Mrs. C. I. Newton and Mrs. Wm. Darling read papers, after which a general discussion was led by Mrs. Henry Tiedeman on the habits and customs of the mountain folk. Mrs. McCullough and Mrs. Lewis Lewellyn sang a lovely duet. The next meeting will be with Mrs. C. C. Farr March 11.

Those present were: Miss Jennie Lafferty, Mesdames Jack Kennedy, Lewis Lewellyn, L. P. Maury, John McCue, Addie McCullough, Grover McQuigge, I. W. Newton, Cora Porter, Geo. Swinney, Fred Shaer, Joe Stanger, D. F. Thompson, Henry Tiedeman, Maud Wilson, Alpha Young, C. C. Farr, V. L. Bailey, Martha Custer, Wm. Darling, C. W. Hill, M. O. Hooton, F. C. Hawk, Wood and Sanders.

Calling cards 100 for $1.50.

Medical Society's Monthly Meet

Last week the Coos County Medical Society held its monthly dinner meeting at the Hotel Chandler. Dr. Russell Keizer of North Bend led a very interesting discussion on the causes of death from appendicitis. Dr. Walker, county health officer, brought up for discussion an immunization program for school children. He stated that while the health department felt that all pre-school and school children should be immunized against small-pox and diphtheria, the health department did not wish to encroach upon the practice of private physicians. After considerable discussion a motion was unanimously passed, asking the health department to take full charge of immunization of pre-school and school children in the county, the work to be done for the cost of the vaccine.

The good weather of the last few weeks has caused every gardener, amateur and otherwise, to take stock of their borders and flower beds and make plans for the coming season. Few of us, I am afraid, do much of the planning that we should do during the long winter evenings. This, as you know, we are all advised to do; but our seed catalogues and flower magazines instead of being placed where they could be easily seen and be an inspiration, have been relegated to the attic or basement, and instead of getting them out, put off our planning until some future, more convenient time. And the result is, that the season finds us, as in the past, without any definite idea of what we want and how to go about it. But we make a start by taking stock of what we have, and along with the rest our attention is drawn to our porch and window boxes. Now just what to put in them is our first thought, and not a few of us get the wrong ones in the wrong place. A few years ago I found in a magazine an article called, "Flowers for the Porch and Window," which gave not only accurate directions for the soil and planting, but also lists of plants suitable for the various locations. As Coquille city homes have the beautiful idea of using these boxes, I am giving the lists, and these may be added to or changed to suit the fancy, by studying a seed catalogue and the particular variety of the plant named may be chosen that one considers more desirable. This is the list:

For southeast, south, southwest and west, where the summer sun is direct for a large part of the day: Low growing for front edge—sweet alyssum, "Carpet of Snow," about 4 inches high; ageratum, "dwarf white," "Little Dorrit Blue" and "Little Blue Star," all under six inches; portulaca, white, pink, scarlet, or bronze, creeping; annual candytuft, white, lavender, purple or cardinal; from eight to twelve inches high; French marigolds, double dwarf. Taller growing, for the middle or back of box, geraniums in variety, 12 inches high; gaillardia, in variety, one to two feet high; dwarf nasturtiums in variety, twelve inches high; coleus, red, yellow and variegated foliage; petunias, in variety, twelve to twenty inches; to droop down from the front of the box, balcony petunias, white, pink, dark red, or violet; nasturtiums in variety.

The planting arrangement, you see, is on the same principle as that in the flower border, as you look at the box from the front the plants grade up toward the tallest ones at the back. For the eastern and northern exposures, where there is little or no sunlight: Vines and German ivy will be good to trail over the edge. Low growing, for the front, verbenas, blue, white, pink and scarlet, six inches; pansies in variety; taller for the middle and back of the box, begonias, pink and reds, six to twelve inches; ferns in variety. For hanging baskets, ivy and vines, spreading ferns, Lobelia Erimes Gracilis, and Alyssum Benthami are good. The different oxalis are also good.

Another article of more recent date give the petunia first place for boxes and recommends the hybrids, using the single smaller flowered varieties. Next to petunias, Alyssum, Little Gem, French marigolds and dwarf nasturtiums, particularly of the Tom Thumb varieties. Kennilworth ivy, an old-fashioned favorite, is used for drooping over the edge with the vines. For the shaded box, this article recommends the tuberous-rooted begonia in variety and for the front, some of the trailing, prostrate varieties. It will be necessary to stake and tie the taller varieties if there is any wind, as they are very brittle. Other things mentioned are California poppies, nemophila, heliotrope, lantana mimulus (musk), schizanthus, (dwarf hybrids), sedums, thumbergia, (black-eyed Susan), torenia Fourrieri, which has blue flowers with yellow centers, viscaria, in the dwarf forms, and moss verbenas, (verbenas erinoides.) Where there is not too much wind montbretias and the smaller types of gladiolus may be used.

For those desiring more green in their boxes, another article gives the following: Box No. 1, Boston fern, Coleus Brillancy, Geranium, Wandering Jew, Vinca Asparagus Sprengeri, Petunia Rosy Morn. Box No. 2, Screw pine, Fuchsia, Pink Lantana, Nasturtium, Vinca Variegata or Periwinkle (plain-leaved), Coleus Brillancy, Lobelia, Ageratum. Box No. 3, Coleus Brillancy, Dracaena, Asparagus Sprengeri, Vinca or Periwinkle, Everblooming Begonia, English Ivy. Box No. 4, Geranium, Ever-flowering Begonia, Coleus Trailing Queen, Petunia Balcony Blue. For the urns, Screw pine or Dracaena, Fuchsia, Petunia Rosy Morn. In this article, the taller plants are placed to the center of the back, graduating to the ends and front of box. Abutilon hybridum (flowering maple) in pink or yellow flowers; geraniums, white, pink or red; Begonia semperperennis, white, pink or red flowering; Fuchsia speciosa, pink flowered, and Madagascaria Periwinkle, Vinca Rosea are the upright plants most recommended. The pink flowered double daisy is also spoken of as suitable for the front.

Now as to soil for your boxes: use top soil and if possible a rich garden loam, as good as can be obtained. Do not use clay, nor pure woods dirt entirely as such a soil will not support cultivated plants. Mix the soil half and half with leaf mold, horse manure or woods dirt. (Be careful of too much chicken manure—it burns.) Commercial fertilizers are valuable, if used carefully. For a box five feet long, one foot by eight inches deep, two ounces, seldom more than twice that should be used. Pure strained bone-meal is excellent for flowers. Be sure to mix the soil and the fertilizer very thoroughly before planting. Another thing, see that the drainage in your boxes is good if you would have healthy plants.

Landscaping

A perfect example of what not to do in landscaping home grounds is as follows: Lawns cut up with flower beds, and shrubs and trees incorrectly placed, foundations exposed by lack of planting, no screen at the rear of grounds.

An ideal plan is with open expanse of lawn, correct foundation plantings, screening the backyard, hedge edging the driveway, trees located for shade.

The front yard is best kept open with trees located for shade and along the street. A hedge may be desirable or groups of shrubs or evergreens at the corners. Planting around the porch and the house will link the house with the grounds, will soften the corners or emphasize desirable architectural features. Some houses may require plantings only at the corners, at the entrance or along the porch, others require low growing shrubs or evergreens along the foundations with taller growers at the corners. Hedges may be desirable along the edges of the lot but shrubs are preferable because of their variety in form, foliage and bloom.

The outlines of shrub planting should be curved on the inside, and the heights should vary, thus avoiding straight unbroken lines along the top and along the edges.

The service area is needed for the laundry, kitchen and garage. A small vegetable garden may be added.

The private area, the "backyard" offers the greatest possibility of making an "outdoor living room," providing many opportunities for rest or recreation for the owners, guests, and children. It is necessary, of course, to screen unsightly or unattractive views, and it is desirable also to obtain privacy. At the same time protection from the sun and wind may be accomplished. The informal style calls for plantings along the outer portions of the areas with shrubs, evergreens and trees. Along the inside edges is the place for perennials, bulbs and roses. In this area may also be garden furniture such as a shelter, bird bath, gazing globe, or seat. The outline of the plantings should be in graceful curves, the taller growers at the corners, and in the rear of the beds and the smaller, more delicate shrubs in front.
