McKinley Notes

The hottest day ever recorded at McKinley was August 4th, when the Weather Bureau thermometer registered 107 degrees. The fire station at Tioga gave the barometer reading at 13, the lowest ever reported there. Considerable damage was done to local gardens throughout the valley and to add to the discomfort two fires were burning briskly in the hills. Both fires are now a bad memory. Although they did not do much damage they might if it had been a little drier.

The county spraying outfit that has been trying out the evergreen blackberry eradication by spraying, was in McKinley to give the vines the second application. The first spraying got about 95 per cent of the vines and where the vines were burned it has proved very effective, according to Mr. Martindale, who operated the outfit.
