Blind Lady Talks to Lions

Miss Leila Miller, of this city, was a guest of the Lions Club yesterday noon, and spoke to the Lions on the subject of blindness, an affliction from which she has suffered for many years. But, although living in total darkness, Miss Miller is not helpless by any means, and there are many things which she does to support herself, as well as caring for the home while her mother, Mrs. Clara Miller, is receiving attention at the Wesley Hospital in Marshfield.

Her talk was appreciated by the members present, who asked many questions, although no one present was able to answer hers which dealt with the two systems by which the blind are enabled to read. In fact, she was much better posted on the subject than were the Lions.

W. M. Cuning, recently elected to membership, was initiated into the club, F. W. Martin delivering the code of ethics obligation and R. A. Jeub the instruction as to the duties of Lionism.

Some question came up as to the advisability of draining the swimming pool which is quite muddy, because of the soft bottom. There is no question about the popularity of the pool, upwards of 200 being the daily average of those who use it, but until it is drained, the soft mud flushed out and gravel spread it will not be as desirable a place to enjoy a swim as it should be. It was left to the committee to decide whether the pool should be emptied and not used again this summer, or emptied and filled again. It is hoped before next season that a gravel bottom may be provided.

The committee decided yesterday afternoon to drain the pool so that necessary work could be done this fall to make it ready for use next summer.

Second Game Here Sunday

Coquille and North Bend are to meet in the second game of the championship series on Sunday, the local park again being the scene of the battle.

The game last Sunday was perhaps the best of the season, and though such a close contest is not looked for again the next affair should at least be as exciting. Manager Fortier will start himself in the lineup, as well as Carl Gilbert, while Perry Roper will be moved to centerfield.

Twice, before bowing to Coquille last Sunday, North Bend had defeated the locals, once 13 to 9 and again 7 to 6. Stanley, the Benders' curveball pitcher, has always hurled good ball against the Loggers and his supporters expect him to do so again on Sunday.

Coquille hopes to win the second game, thus taking the championship in the Southern Oregon Coast League, and then to meet Grants Pass for the leadership of the entire south section of the state. Grants Pass, out for the state honors, is very desirous of playing the Loggers, and has written two long letters in request of a game. Manager Fortier is also hoping that terms can be arranged between the locals and the outside team. If Coquille should defeat North Bend on Sunday, she might go to Grants Pass on August 28.

North Bend at two bells on Sunday here.

Women Oppose Consolidation

Declaring that the voters must first make certain whether the advocates of the Zorn-Macpherson School moving bill are "working on the construction gang or on the wrecking crew," the Oregon Clubwoman, official publication of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs, has come out editorially against the measure.

Pointing to the fact that extravagant claims are being made that the measure would save "one million dollars annually," the Clubwoman editorially says, "In studying the budgets of the institutions of higher learning, we find that the anticipated income for all is but two millions of dollars. In other words, if we consolidate the College and the University on the Corvallis campus, we should be able to support the double student body at Corvallis for one-half the cost and throw in for good measure support for the Medical School at Portland, the Doernbecher Hospital, the two Junior Colleges at Ashland and La Grande, and the Teachers' College at Eugene and in addition create a new institution at Salem. It seems as if we were paging Alladin."

In commenting on the claim that Corvallis should be chosen as the site instead of Eugene because it has more grounds and buildings the editorial continues:

"If it were sheep that was to be herded, this reasoning might hold, but we are not herding sheep at our University and College, we are training citizens, preparing the youth of our State to assume places of leadership in industry, engineering, agriculture, business and in the world of letters and art. In the matter of class-room space, there is a wide difference in the needs of various courses. . . . A greatly increased student body will mean unquestionably a necessity for an increased building program both for instruction and for housing. This increased building cost would be more than the presumed savings for many years to come. Before voting we must make certain whether the advocates are working on the construction gang or on the wrecking crew."

Benjamin Franklin Has High Place in History

The passing of generations has not dwarfed Benjamin Franklin. He seems to tower more and more over his contemporaries as the perspective of history lengthens.

This is hardly because Franklin brought the lightning down from the sky, or because he collected data on waterspouts and earthquakes, or devised a remedy for smoking chimneys, or invented bifocal spectacles, or made a clock, or had more than an average knowledge of medicine.

Nor is it due to his political services, great as they were; nor to his publishing and printing activities; nor to his having signed the Declaration of Independence.

He was the first "civilized" public man in America. That accounts for his ever-growing fame.

It was the many-sidedness of Franklin, along with his humanity and his magnetism, that has projected the greatness of him down to the present time. In his era the man was a modernist. There was nothing reactionary in his make-up and yet he was never a radical.

Benjamin Franklin's enduring fame rests upon the fact that he was far in advance of his day and generation. He would not be lost in this modern world, nor be bewildered by it. It is in the many ways in which he differed from his contemporaries rather than in his kinship with them that he stands out from his time.—Asbury Park (N. J.) Evening Press.

Daddy Lion Deserts Home

In a Field Museum exhibit showing mountain lions at home, no male lion appears with the mother and her kittens in the den, for curators explain that the male lion deserts his home while the babies are young, returning only after the young lions are partly independent.—Chicago News.

Victoria Speaker Calls Tourist Trade, "Bags of Gold"

101, for it is only 18 miles across the Straits of Juan de Fuca, from Port Angeles to Victoria, and the ferry service is frequent.

The Victoria publicity bureau last year distributed 863,000 pieces of literature, nine and one half tons, and he knew it paid.

Mr. Anscomb, who followed Mr. Warren spoke from typewritten manuscript and the Sentinel is unable to quote more than a few of the very interesting facts he related.

The tourist business, he said, is a great deal like farming, the soil must be continually cultivated—and that is what the Victoria bureau is doing with its "Follow the Birds to Victoria" slogan and its continuous personal contact, as well as advertising in the United States and Canada. It is particularly vital to the Pacific coast which has so much to offer the traveller in scenery, climate and natural resources.

"Everything depends on the slender golden thread of good will. The tourist business cannot be over-exploited or abused," the speaker declared and called attention to France, where the annual tourist crop has fallen off from 300 million dollars annually to 100 million.

Mr. Anscomb said he had become positive the past few weeks that business is on the up grade and that now is the time to prepare for and seek the touring vacationists, not for next year only, but for all the years to come. And a close mutual co-operation in developing tourist travel between Canada and the United States will continue to cement the friendship existing between those two great nations.

In commenting upon Mr. Anscomb's talk, Mr. Miller complimented it as the finest publicity presentation he had ever heard. He also told of a plan on which he is working, which could only be put into effect by legislative enactment. It is to use one of the four cents gasoline tax in Oregon for advertising this state in the east, south, north and west.

The influx of tourists which would follow would more than double the gasoline consumption in Oregon so that instead of losing that one cent per gallon to highway construction and maintenance, it would produce two cents per gallon more of revenue to the state on what is now being sold.

The idea is good and if the legislators are brought to see the light of what those tens of thousands of dollars spent for publicity would mean in dollars and cents, Oregon may yet have a suitable fund for publicity purposes.

"United let us connect with these hidden bags of gold" was one expression Mr. Anscomb used in urging closer co-operation between the states of Oregon and Washington and British Columbia. For "if they come to visit us they will travel over your highways," was his self-evident conclusion.
